HOW TO MAKE MONEY.

F SW women are averse to making pin money. It doesn't matter whether they need it or not. There is special pleasure in spending money one has made through one's own initiative and resources. Each day there will appear on this page one of a series of suggestions on making money. Each article will give women readers of The Whig an idea that may be turned into a moneymaker. No. 68-The Miracle Woman and her Wonder Shop

One of the most wonderful shops in the wonderful city of New York is run by a woman who is known among her appreciative patrons as the "miracle woman." While this wonderful shop may be described as a "headquarters for mending and makeovers," such an appellation gives little hint of the unusual character of the work which is carried on under the "miracle woman's" supervision.

The make-over shop probably sprang into existence as a result of a crying need among the hotel people of the Thirties; but its sphere of influence has expanded to comprise a region which has no definited boundaries in this big, broad country. The very hotel people whose needs gave birth to the abroad the good news, so that it is no unusual thing for garment to travel hundreds of miles to find its way to re-juvenation in the have for makeovers. If the owner of a very attractive evening frock, for example, finds that the ment which once fitted perfectly fails to connect by an inch or two around the waist, she immediately despatches it to the make-over shop where ts measurements are made to assume proper proportions. Or, there may be a three-cornered tear in a certain broadcloth skirt-part of a recently purchased suit. At the makeover shop it is speedily restored to its original condition. Most marvelous transformations are effected with garments that have become "oldfashioned" The narrow skirts of a season ago are made to ripple in a strictly-up-to-themode manner. Bodices are altered so as to take on the highwaisted effect now so populary Sleeves that were once tight become loose and filmy. In the case of a blue satin evening gown, the transformation was complete, for it had been the most contracted of skirts and the most elongated of waists. When it emerged, the skirt fell in ripples with a graceful over-skirt, the edge being shaped in scallops like the latest imported models. The waist was principally a crushed girdle of satin with more

Even the tailor-made suit is not beyond the possibilities of the make-over shop. A blue serge suit which came in for re-juvenation had its coat cut off in front and trimmed with bands of black satin in the back, felled down with some was given a new rolling collar of satin and new ouffs with bright buttons running in a brand new direction. It was no net draped over the shoulders.

Altogether, it bore not the slightest resemblance to its for-longer a mere blue serge suit. The genius of the make-over shop is always perfectly frank about the amount which it is worth while to expend upon a garment, Sometimes a faded out gown is dipped in a deeptoned dye, decked out in new garniture of Roman plaid collar and cuffs, and lo!, the transformation is complete! And all at a very reasonable price. The unusualness of the niche that is filled by this establishment may be adjudged by the fact that a frock from some town in Iowa will find itself in close proximity to one from South Carolina, or that a bedraggled dancing costume from Harlem finds a place alongside a motoring outfit Maine. Schoolgirls' clothes that everlastingly need letting down or grown-ups' shop have proven the most ef- clothes that are almost as often in dire need of other kinds of espansion, all find a refuge in the make-over shop. A continuous procession of college boys deposit bundles of socks to be darned, often with toes out or heels out or with ghastly rips-even in the very best silk ones! Shirts that have given way under the arm or up close to the collar often keep company with the socks. Mending lace is another specialty of the make-over shop. Sometimes there is a break in the lace where the rose-petal joins the stem or where a spray finds its furthest point of convergence, but no problem of this sort presents intricacies which are beyond the resources of this particular mending bureau. The probabilities are that they would be making lace if there were not so many socks and shirts to be darned.

The make-over shop is not given over to remodelling. It also creates. There are some exquisite hand-made waists, a few dainty frocks, lingerie and various other articles which make their individual appeal to the well-dressed woman, Orders are taken for costumes which must be designed to fit some particular need or occasion. For instance, it happen that a bride-to-be sends in an order for a motoring outwhich shall be essentially practical and at the same time dressy enough for stop-overs. The result as turned out by the genius of the make-over shop will probably be a soft, dark blue silk with plaid girdle and cuffs that button back, or a pongee that is at once serviceable and distinctive. Altogether this unique establishment is the last word in sartorial thrift and elegance and the only wonder of it is that enterprising business women of other cities have not, in a greater number of instances, adapted the idea which has been worked out to such a degree of perfection by the "miracle-woman" of the make-over shop.

A TIMELY TALK TO GIRLS!

On the Psychology of Clothes -Mrs. D. A. Volume's Splendid Address.

Mrs. (Dr.) D. A. Volume gave the members of the Canadian Girls in Training, of the three Methodist churches of the city, a heart-to-heart talk on "The Psychology of Clothes," at a meeting held in Sydenham street lecture hall on Tuesday evening. This work among the "teen age" girls of the Protestant Sunday schools of Kingston which is a new venture, is proving very successful as was shown by the attendance at this meeting.

The talk, which was very timely, was listened to with great interest by the girls, Mrs. Volume began her remarks by comparing the dress of today with that of thirty years ago. When speaking about the styles which are the vogue at the present time, she contended that they are not any more extreme than they were thirty years ago. During the period of the war, the women and girls were called upon to do men's work in offices and munition factories, and this required them to wear skirts which were shorter than those they had previously worn. They were found to be so much more convenient and comfortable that they were not anxious to go back to the former styles. Of course, Mrs. Volume deplored the extreme fashions displayed by many people to day and urged the girls not to adopt them.

The speaker said that girls could not be blamed for wanting to dress as attractively as possible and in the prevailing style, and that they were obeying a natural instinct in dressing to attract men; and that if some girls had to choose between porridge and silk stockings, they would likely choose the silk stockings.

Mrs. Volume tried to make the girls realize that while it was natural and right for them to dress themselves as attractively as possible, it was not right for them to do the seeking and pursuing when it came to the matter of male companions. Sho advised them to not always choose the one who could give them the most boxes of candy, if he was trying to put himself through college, who are educating to improve themselves for the future, and they could do more for them in the years to come. In closing Mrs. Volume urged hurst says she is now a Canadian bethe girls to keep their sense of valnese, and if they had the Heavenly Father for their friend, they would have no difficulty in doing this.

Miss Grace Horsfall, president of the Sydenham C. G. I. T. department presided. The programme elso consisted of two numbers in the form of charades-one presented by the Princess Street group and the other by the Sydenham Street girls. Miss Dora Amey delighted the gathering with a

Will your "Good Morning" last all day?

Easy to start from the breakfast table with zest and enthusiasm, but how easy is it to keep on?

Does ambition last, or lag, as the day develops?

The afternoon "slump" is a factor to be counted upon, in business or social life.

Usually, there's a reason.

Nerves whipped by tea or coffee won't keep on running, and they won't stand constant whipping.

Many a man or woman who has wished the afternoon would be as bright as the morning has simply been wishing that the nerves wouldn't have to pay the natural penalty for being whipped with the caffeine drug.

You can get Postum from your grocer or your waiter today, and probably you'll begin to have better tomorrows, as so many thousands have had, who have made the change from coffee to Postum.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.
