ONE REEL YARNS

POOR, DEAR GRANDMOTHER Roger and Velma had not seen their grandmother since they were little children. She lived far away-too far to visit at vacation times. They had no idea of what sort she was, except that probably she was old and crabby. Neither of them were very happy when their mother told them their grandmother was coming for a visit. "It won't be any fun always going on tipice," grumbled Roger.

"And she'll probably want me read to her." sighed Velma. .. Their mother cautioned them about banging doors and shouting. When Grandmother finally arrived, Roger and Velma were very politic and tried hard to be thoughtful. They were surprised to find that she wasn't nearly as old and feeble as they had expected. They remembered their mother's warning, however, and were silent at mealtimes and avoided running into her room for fear of disturbing her. They found she wasn't half as much of a bother as they had feared she would be. In fact, they hardly knew she was around.

Roger and Velma were not in the house much anyway. Both were interested in chicken raising and spent most of their time working around the coops. Roger's chum, Clifford,

Velma and Roger were very quiet as they went back to the house. Then Roger spoke: "It's our own fault for putting her on the shelf. I hope it isn't too late to make her see we want

It is called the Zangram with scissors or a sharp knife, following closely the pencil lines, you are ready to work the great Tangram. The problem is to put all seven pieces together, no piece overlapping another, to make figures of people, animals and objects.

Our illustration shows an old, stooped man taking his morning stroll. The small outline figure in front of the old man shows how the seven the annual city poultry show.

The Highland cadets of Kingston have set their hearts on the winning of the junior series, and have feen regularly attending instruction drills on miniature range work. Their progress may be gauged from the fact that at their first practices, the average score was 40, at the second practice, 56.5, while last week the team averaged 65. In the opinion of those who know, Kingston will furnrsh some sensational developments in ride shooting this year.

An intercollegiate rifle association has been formed under the auspices of the R.M.C. authorities, and includes Varsity, McGill, Queen's and R.M.C., and will also be open to other institutions of higher educations. Those members of teams making certain averages in the various matches, will receive silver spoons with the crest of the I.C.R.A. engraved on the handle. A handsome trophy is to be competed for by the several teams, and the first interclub match takes place at the latter end of this month.
