"THE DAY OF JUDGMENT" BIG CLOTHING OPPORTUNITY

Sermon by Rev. R. P. McKim
At St. John's Church
Mission.

The mission being conducted in St. John's church, Portmouth, by Rev. R. P. McKim, M.A., St. John, N.B., is proving most successful. On Tuesday evening there was a good-sized congregation. Mr. McKim took as his text Matthew XII, 36: "In the day of Judgment." In part he said: "I cannot preach the love of God and the everlasting Life of Jesus Christ, without speaking of the awfulness of Sin and certainty of God's judgment of sin."

In all probability some of you that are here tonight would not have come if you had known that I was going to preach on this subject. I remember a woman telling me that as a girl she used to frequently go to the cathedral to hear Bishop Baldwin preach about the coming back of Jesus and how it used to frighten her. Thank God she has long got over that feeling. She now looks for the coming back of Jesus.

"You find Judgment going on constantly—in the same conditions in which we live. For instance, if you are in business, your goods are under judgment every hour of the day and as you spread them on the counter you must submit them to the judgment of the public. If you go into a shop to do some purchasing, you are going to pass judgment upon the goods and you are also going to submit to a judgment because the man on the other side of the counter is just possibly wondering whether you are in a position to pay for all these goods that you are asking to look at. If you are entertaining, don't you know perfectly well that the guests who come are going to examine all the furniture and everything about it and are going to talk about it and going to pass judgment upon it? You cannot go along the street and pass a policeman without undergoing a judgment. Judgment is a matter of everyday condition and when we acknowledge God's right to pass judgment we know that as has a right to pass judgment. Judgment is also something in the conscience of everybody. You would be perfectly sure that eventually you would be judged. Conscience would be telling you. Conscience told Felix 'what that man says is right.' Felix would have refused to think of it but conscience said 'Felix, what that man says is right.' Dare we fail to talk about it? You would have no confidence in me as a mission preacher if I did not talk about it."

"On Monday it is wash day and among the houses the clothes are hanging out, they were white and clean. Plenty of work had been spent on them to make them white and they were beautiful in their whiteness. Presently the snow began to fall and settled on the clothes that were immaculately white, but when the snow fell they seemed to be soiled and somebody noticed it and said it soiled the clothes but a woman said: 'Yes, but the snow is God Almighty's white and who could wash white like that?' It is God Almighty's white that is expected of me and you for it is God who judges."

"Earthly courts have an appeal. If you lose you can carry to another court if you have means enough. If you try to sell goods and nobody will buy them you can take them some place else to sell them. There is no appeal from God's judgment. No higher court. One place else that we can go if God condemns. It is a solemn thing and it is true."

"It was a dull afternoon in winter and in a railway station there was a young man waiting for his train and looking to see if there was a magazine or anything to amuse himself with and as he stood there it occurred to him that he might amuse himself by scratching on the window with his diamond ring. Suddenly a voice called 'Don't do that.' It was a street boy. 'Why not?' he enquired, and the boy said, 'Because you can't rub it out.' There is a book of life. There has been a good deal written there in the last few days and weeks when I think of the record I write. The things I do or do not do go into God's presence and I cannot rescue them. God's judgment is upon them. It brings up the scene, the trial scene in Dickens' Tale of Two Cities. Can't you feel the tensi-ty of it, nobody hardly daring to breathe—the prisoner being tried for his life—the two doors, one leading to life and liberty and the other to the dungeon and death. God's judgment means life or death, heaven or hell. Read about Hell—it is a place of anguish where the devil and his angels are, a place of shame, a place that you cannot get away from, and Oh, you do not want to go there. Then think about Heaven—the joy and happiness—where your mother perhaps, and your dear ones are, and Oh, you want to go there. Please, Jesus, lead me to that happy place, for there is Reality."

"There is in a sense, four judgments. One judgment, is already passed if you will believe in Jesus Christ. Remember what it says, 'He that believeth on the Son has everlasting life and shall not come into judgment but has passed death into life. There is a sense in which judgment is passed and every true believer in Jesus Christ has already passed judgment on the Cross of Jesus, and if you have trusted Jesus as your Saviour and believe on Him then you shall not come into judgment but have passed from Death into Life."

Extensive civil service probe is planned, according to Ottawa rumors. British Columbia legislation against Orientals declared ultra vires. Lloyd George stands or falls by the Irish treaty.

Bornard Sky Purchases Entire Stock of Clothing Manufacturer.

Commencing next Saturday the men of Kingston and vicinity will have an unparalleled opportunity to buy winter and spring clothing at prices that will be far below what they have been accustomed to paying for garments anything like the quality that will be offered. Owing to general business depressions a prominent clothing manufacturer was forced to liquidate his stocks. Skys were fortunate to purchase over 1,000 garments at an astonishingly low price. This stock will be disposed of in direct to public sales commencing Saturday morning.

Mens suits, many admirable for present wear as well as hundreds of patterns and weights suitable for spring; overcoats in all the popular styles; men's odd pants boy's clothing etc. will be offered in this sale at just half the regular wholesale price so that everyone who seizes this opportunity will certainly make a very substantial saving in their clothing bill. In addition to the clothing the entire stock of furnishings in Sky's store will be offered at half price. A value giving opportunity such as this is unique in retail circles in Kingston. No one who considers a real, genuine bargain can afford to miss at least seeing these great values, which are bound to be the talk of the town, from the moment they are placed on the bargain tables at Sky's store. Watch for the full page advertisement which will appear in tomorrow's paper announcing the opening specials and by all means come to Sky's, 244 Princess street, Saturday morning, and examine the values offered.

Meeting of Unemployed Discusses the Situation

A meeting of the unemployed was held at the Trades and Labor council hall on Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of discussing the present high cost of living and the unemployment situation. There were about one hundred and fifty present. William Fleet, president, occupied the chair and in a short address reviewed the present conditions in Kingston. Another meeting will be held to discuss further details and consider resolutions.

Why is James Reid's big clearing furniture sale such a whirlwind success? Numerous bargains. Startling allegations are made by woman witness in Brantford police probe. If you have a selling problem—advertise and get it solved.
