No wonder the poster girls are all stuck up. A little conference now and then is mighty annoying to armament men.

Many persons with domestic troubles insist on sharing them with the public.

New York chorus girls are said to be making their own clothes. No great task.

At times we suspect that the dogs of war are closely related to the dog in the manger.

When a man starts to make money by hook or crook he usually tries to hook his friends.

The real Chinese puzzle is this: Why do they wear their shirt tails outside their pants?

In the interest of truthful advertising, why not prefix "ab" when speaking of a "used" car?

Now that the world is safe for democracy, the next little task is to make it safe for authority.

Most of the world's trouble is occasioned by the habit of thinking in terms of boundary lines.

Frequently a live-wire travelling salesman has a shocking effect on current expenses.

"Who cares what becomes of France?" demands an embittered Frenchman. Evidently Poitoucoos.

A wage cut never goes deep enough to affect the expense account of the ultimate consumer.

Peace is a wonderful thing. Since Mexico agreed to be reasonable, not a single oil well has gone dry.

A doubtful brother says civilization is on its last legs. Don't despair. Perhaps it is only a relapse.

Nobody seems to know just what the next war will be about, but everybody seems to understand that it is inevitable.

Always in certain members of the blessed human race the only notion of burying the hatchet is to bury it in somebody's neck.

Now Reschowski, the chess prodigy, yearns to sing. Well, the boy should find some means of making a name for himself.

There are two kinds of nations: those who feel big enough to lick the world, and those that are required to lick its boots.

According to the German monarchist press, William Hohenzollern is still "German emperor and king of Prussia." However, he is not working at the job.

The Russian government will grant amnesty to all Russian fugitives who wish to return home, but it can hardly be imagined that anybody who got away would want to go back.

Stefansson says it is never colder than sixty below in the Arctic. That's about the temperature the family says the house is when you come home from work and are told that the furnace is out.

QUEEN'S ENTERPRISE.

It is safe to say that no one who attended the last University concert went away disappointed. The most cultured were not disturbed by flaws, and even the least musical were caught by the personality and accomplishment of Miss Hess.

The thanks of the city are due to the University senate which by a grant has made this series of concerts and lectures possible, and still more to the committee which undertakes the delicate responsibility of choosing whom to bring. But for their enterprise, this city would be as strictly limited to local talent as are Hay Bay or Snow Road.

There should have been a sprinkling of vacant seats at past concerts is but one further proof of the need for such educative work as this committee has undertaken.

THE DOGS DO BARK!

In the number of shaggy and breedless dogs which are allowed to snarl and fight on its streets, Kingston can have no rival south of Hudson's Bay.

largest cities of North America and in London, three of them being the largest tea warehouses in the world. But while Mr. Larkin has achieved phenomenal success in business, he has always been public-spirited and played an active and appreciable part in local and national affairs.

For seventeen years he was vice-chairman of the Toronto General Hospital Board, and to that institution he has given in a generous way his means, his time and his effort. He was one of the few to whom that magnificent pile of hospital buildings covering nine acres and costing three-and-three-quarter millions of dollars, is due.

In the person of Mr. Larkin Canada will have as high commissioner in London a statesman of commerce. Vision, courage and achievement have combined to make his name known throughout the length and breadth of Canada, and have given it, as well, a continental fame.
