Hydro Gave Free Hand.

How Murray came to get his information about the Hydro, he telis quite frankly. He went to Sir Adam Beck and Engineer Gaby, with whom he had been associated, and informed them of his retainer from the National Electric Light Association. He said he was going to collect the comities of the States hold more power plete facts of situations in Canada and the States under private and in reserve and sell more energy per public ownership and be governed by token, they can claim a greater reliability of supply and that the supply me that he would place at my disposal the commission's books and all is cheaper to the consumer." available data in their hands to as sist in this undertaking. That he has at the end of the fiscal year 1920, made good on this promise may be gleaned from the information presented in this report," Murray exby the Hydro-Electric Power Complains this willingness to give information on the ground that Beck and mission, the remainder representing Gaby believe that Hydro service is tors and acquired from those investhe best anywhere and were confident that he would so report. He says: tors by the commission. The report

"They wanted the facts made known in the entertainment of the belief that when they were assembled it would be shown that power as produced by the Hydro was cheaper compared to any elsewhere. In turn I made it apparent that I was going to 'chop and let the chips fall where they may and they met me as one, in this spirit of fair play. Facts are impersonal things. Sometimes they hurt, but no school produces teachers such as they. This eport cannot and does not intend to dim the glory of Hydro's achievements. Hydro replaced certain unregulated private electric utilities whose operations were far inferior to it. The principal problem was to determine whether there was anything in the Ontario plan- to commend itself as applicable in the

Dr. as at present Straton will preach next Sunday on the subject of Dr. MacArthur's resignation from the church.

"No longer does the devil woggle a wicked forked tail, but now he shakes a shimmying shoulder," Straton declared. "The devil of today is no longer the bold, brazen devil of years ago. The new model has arrayed himself like an angel of light. He dresses in latest fashion; is a past master in bridge, whist and the bunny hug."

Nor does the new devil care where he goes, in Straton's belief, for, he says: "The devil often sits in the seats of theologians, and sometimes enters the pulpit. The 1922 devil is an advocate of jazz and a regular attendant at moveis and theatre."

Supreme efforts of the new devil, according to Dr. Straton's analysis, are: To undermine the virtue of women; to destroy masculine honor, to wreck the marriage vow; to checkmate the church; and to over-
