Theatrical

Touight "College Frolic of 1922" The Theatre Night Committee of Queen's is presenting its vaudeville performance that made such a tremendous hit recently, for the banefit of the citizens of Kingston at the Grand Opera House to-night.

The programme is made up of several really big vaudeville acts put on by different faculties of the university, and some independent acts. It is hard to pick out the best numbers in the performance; each and every act has a high artistic merit and there is every reason to believe that a better performance will be given this evening than the veritable triumph that was accomplished last week.

Dancing acts, songs, a real minstrel show, clever cartooning and monologues, are a few of the items that go to make up this excellent arm in three places. +variety show.

This time the performance is under the patronage of the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, and the students are confident that they can give the citizens of Kingston a real night's fun. Saturday. -Advt.

Zane Grey, the distinguished wri ter of stirring stories of the American west, in his novel, "The Last 'Trail." made a mysterious lone bandit figure the on which centred the -a bandot operating at night on lonely roads in a mountainous recharm of a woman, risking his life at times to be with her. This lone bandit has been transferred to the motion picture by William Fox, whose film version of "The Last Trail" opens a three-day engagement at the Allen Theatre to-day. The story is a fascinating one, and the picture, which is a super-special production, was directed by Emmett J. Flynn.

We have been fortunate in securing for to-day, Tuesday and Wednesday the authentic pictures of the wedding ceremony of Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles at Westminster Abbey, 28th February. These are positively the first pictures to reach Canada, and Kingston can be well proud of being one of the first to see them .- Advt.
