OLD CATARAQUI SCHOOL AGAIN UNDER DISCUSSION

Building to be Placed in the Hands of Civic Industries Committee.

"That this board is of the opinion that the old Cataraqui school building is of no further use for school purposes, and that we place the building in the hands of the industries committee of the city council for industrial purposes, they to safeguard the interests of the public school board to the extent of $6,500; in the event of the sale or rental of the building for industrial purposes, that the rental be not less than $400, to be paid to the school board."

The above resolution, moved by Trustee Farrell, seconded by Trustee Lemmon, was passed at a special meeting of the Board of Education held on Wednesday evening, at which the chairman, Trustee W. H. Godwin presided.

The industries committee desired to get the school for Mr. Stirling, a newcomer to the city, who is about to start a plant for the manufacture of refrigerators. Ald. W. P. Peters, chairman of the industries committee, and Dr. W. W. Sands, city clerk, and Mr. Stirling met the board and discussed the matter.

Trustee Jones, seconded by Trustee Norman, moved an amendment "That the property committee be requested to advertise the school for sale, and that the committee report back to the board," but the amendment was voted down.

RAN HIS MOTOR STAGE THROUGH TWO WINTERS

Without Missing One Day—Fine Record of G. A. Babcock, Odessa.

The stage drivers who come in and out of Kingston each day have to take their hats off to G. A. Babcock, the owner of the Kingston-Odessa stage. During the past two years, although the weather has been very bad at times, Mr. Babcock has never failed to make the trip to Kingston by motor stage. The snow on the roads during the winter months did not prevent the Odessa stage driver from putting his motor bus over the main road. Now that the long stretch of provincial highway has been completed from Kingston, for a distance of about nine miles, travelling is a great deal easier.

In most cases the other stage drivers have travelled to the city by motor stage, but there were days when the drivers had to call horses into service.

Mr. Babcock has the contract to deliver the mail on the main road between Kingston and Odessa on the mail route which is known as Kingston R. M. D. No. 3.

MAPLE SYRUP APPEARS.

Sold on Market Thursday at $2.25 a Gallon.

Maple syrup has made its first appearance on the Kingston market on Thursday morning. The first can of syrup was brought to the city by H. Robson, who resides six miles north of Odessa in the Camden East district. Mr. Robson, when speaking to the Whig, stated that he did not expect there would be a very large supply of syrup this year on account of the weather being so mild. In some sections it is stated that several farmers have not tapped all their trees up until the present time. These farmers never expect for a minute that the weather would turn so mild or the trees would have been tapped some time ago. Mr. Robson said that if he had tapped a few days sooner the supply from his bush would have been more plentiful. It is expected that the change in the temperature on Wednesday night would cause a good run of sap on Thursday.

Syrup sold on the market at the rate of $2.25 a gallon. This time last year the price was $3 a gallon. It is thought that the price later will be about $1.75 a gallon.

ADDRESS BY T. J. RIGNEY

On "The Legal Profession" to the Royal Military College Cadets.

An interesting address on "The Legal Profession" was given by T. J. Rigney, K.C., before the cadets and members of the staff at the Royal Military College on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Rigney sketched some of the history of the profession and added some sound advice to the young man who might be thinking of studying law as a career. Introduced by General Macdonell, the speaker expressed his pleasure at being asked to give an address before the cadets, and then continued with a few opening remarks on the qualifications necessary to become a full-fledged lawyer.

With regard to the legal profession, in the first place, it is well known that this practice is supposed to be reserved for those more or less qualified for the work by a course of studies. After three years of study at Osgoode Hall, there is a possibility that, if he is lucky, the embryonic judge may be turned out a full-fledged lawyer—that is, in theory. He is then admitted to practice. It is, of course, impossible for him to jump into the strenuous life that falls to the lot of the practitioner. He is supposed to have got a knowledge of all these things, "but," said Mr. Rigney, "I need not assure you that he does not. As a matter of fact, he has just learned where to look for them."

When confederation brought together the scattered provinces, certain powers were delegated to each, generally spoken of as local autonomy. Amongst other things they were given the responsibility for the administration of laws and to a certain extent the making of specified laws. Criminal law was passed and adopted by the dominion as a whole, and common law, which applies not only to Canada, but to the whole American continent, is the foundation and basis of the whole. It is one which enunciates the old principles about which the whole foundation of law is established.

Among other things delegated to the various provinces were the courts. Judges were appointed to the high court of justice and county judges were created who in a measure restricted to dealing with minor cases in the territory under their jurisdiction. Then in their turn came the magistrates and justices of the peace. That practically completes the machinery for the administration of the laws of the country.

The young practitioner starts out as the servant of the state, indirectly, because, on admission to the bar he is compelled to join the law society. The lawyer is responsible to the bar, the bar to the judiciary and the judiciary to the state.

No lawyer should start out with the idea that the practice and the profits which accrue is the ultimate goal to which he is striving for it will lead him to disappointment from the outset. However, the majority of young men try to become lawyers, judges and distinguished advocates and consequently the disappointments are fewer than they might be.

Next to the fundamental principles, the embryonic advocate must realize that the whole law is not an exact science as the professor of mathematics demonstrates his science, yet neither is it under the control of public prejudices and popular clamor. He must view things from both sides and get a detached impersonal perspective and if he does this he is discarding one of the difficulties which confront his competitors and is approaching the ideals of the profession.

The legal profession must be gauged in a measure by the same standards which prevail in every other profession. Of course there are prejudices regarding the career of a barrister, many people believing that lawyers are more or less clever fellows who guard your property so
