The Runner on Your Living Room Table

"Show me a person's living-room table cover," says a friend of mine (she is a professional interior decorator) "and I can instantly gauge the degree to which that person's artistic taste has been developed."

There is no doubt about it, the cover on our living room table is a bit of evidence which may either condemn or acquit us of the charge of decorative crime. If, for instance, this cover is of bright red plush with golden fringes hand-embroidered upon it (this describes a cover I have actually seen!) then the possessor is undeniably "guilty". If, however, her living-room table cover is of some dark, good-looking tapestry, velour, or brocade, she is "not guilty."

It would be interesting to collect, in one room, all the table covers of my Column Readers and compare them, wouldn't it? Ask yourself if your table-cover would stand this test. If your answer to yourself is in the negative then, by all means, set about making yourself a new and more tasteful one.

It is not necessary to go to great expense in acquiring an artistic table cover. We all have some suitable material on hand which may be put to use. A piece of Oriental embroidery would, for instance, make a lovely cover; if it is not large enough in itself, it may be used as the centre of a runner of plain-colored, dark silk, the entire runner being then edged with gumpes the same dark shade as the silk.

Scraps of Oriental silk may be used in the same way. If these scraps happen to be oblong in shape, they may be applied on either end of the plain silk runner, as bands, then the entire runner edged with gumpes.

Cloth-of-silver and cloth-of-gold, backed by a more solid material, are especially effective in a living room where there is mahogany furniture which is upholstered in tapestry or velvet.

What the Editor Hears

That the beauty and variety of the flowers shown in the florist shops this week has never been surpassed in Kingston. No doubt as a result of this fine display, the churches will be beautifully decorated and the sick in the hospitals and the "shut-in's" in their homes, will have a fragrant reminder of their friends loving thought for them.

That there are two things needed in these days; first for rich men to find out how poor men live; and second for poor men to know how rich men work.

That Kingston will have the usual Easter sales several already being announced for next week.

That the London Daily Mail declares that while most men cross-channel air passengers seem stricken almost speechless, the women seem quite unperturbed and converse as usual.

That one New York store is employing a returned soldier to give art embroidery lessons in its fancy work department.

Silk Stockings.
"Silk undergarments or silk stockings—any silk coming in constant contact with the body—should be washed after every wearing, otherwise the body soil will in some degree rot the silk. If this rule is observed an astonishing amount of wear can be got out of a pair of good silk stockings or socks. Why not double the wear of either of these by the simple process of washing them out every night? All stockings need frequent washing and should be mended before they are washed. If both these things are done there will never be great, gaping holes to darn."

Plain, dark colored velvets and velours lined with sateen and bound with gold galoon are also much in favor, as are the heavy satin finished about the for edges with long stitches of self-color wool.

Sunfast chenille is another fabric worthy of consideration—especially if the housewife buys gumpes of the same color to run around the four extreme-edges.

When poplin, damask, China silk or raiak silk in some dark color have been used for over-drapes at the windows, any of these materials may be used, with excellent taste, for table runners.

And now comes the question of shape and size. "Do living-room table runners hang over the ends of the table any more?" asked a Column Reader in a personal letter to me, not long ago. Yes, they do but not as deeply as used to be the fashion. They need not necessarily hang over the table-ends; they may be quite narrow and come only to the edge of the table at each end. Or they may exactly fit the surface of the table—an excellent shape to choose in cases where the polished surface of the table has been marred. Again the cloth may be little more than a mat, not reaching to the edge of the table on any side.

Above all remember that the tabirunner or mat should never be so conspicuous as to signal the eye of a person entering the room; nor so inharmonious with the other colors in the room, that it jars on the nerves of the beholder.

color for spring and it is seen in models for street wear, sports, afternoon and evening.

Of soft yellow kasha cloth, the three-piece costume above introduces a striking effect in its black stitching, which appears in three-row horizontal stripes. The slip-on dress is a simple affair with turn-back lapels flanking a white vestee. Monkey fur in solid effect trims the cuffs and forms the chin collar.

Many Canadians at Atlantic City. On Saturday night the boardwalk at Atlantic City was thronged with thousands of visitors from many cities there for Palm Sunday. The boardwalk yesterday had the "petit promenade" that held a hint of what is to be expected on Easter Sunday, when the disciples of Dame Fashion will blossom forth in all their spring-time radiance.

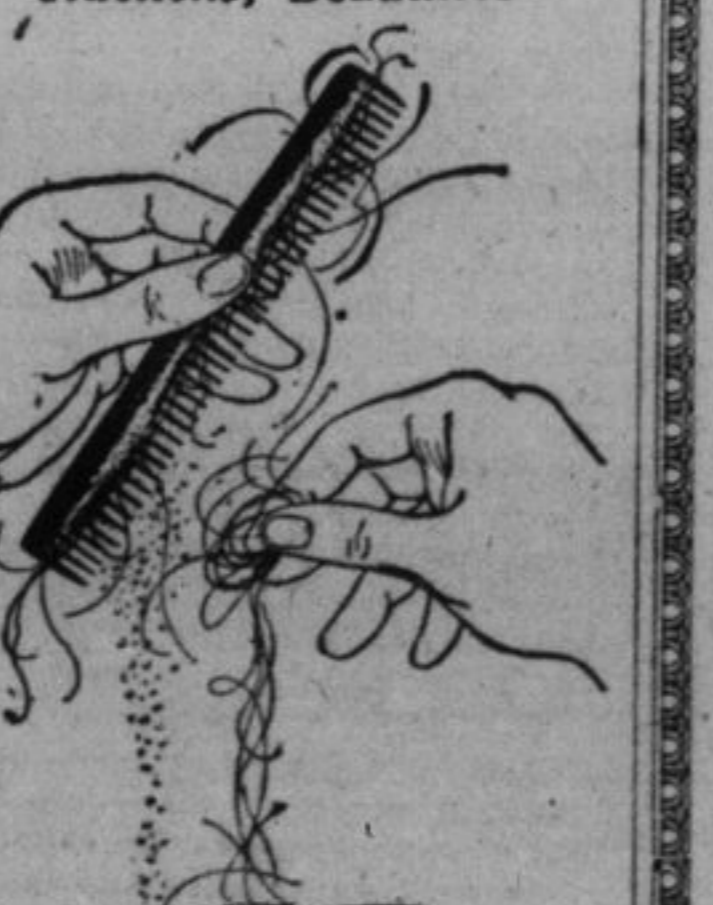

Many have arrived with modish gowns and smart millinery that will brighten the otherwise sober hued procession. There is an impatient class that must do everything by anticipation, and some of its members flock there annually to appear in the Palm Sunday assembly on the wooden walk.

Every boardwalk hotel will be filled at Easter. Several already have discontinued making reservations. But there are many hotels off the boardwalk that are prepared to absorb the beach front overflow. Still, several of the avenue houses also have ceased to make further bookings.

To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

THURSDAY, APRIL 13TH.
A very important day is forecast from this day's astral operations. There is prospect of a sudden visitation which may involve a radical upheaval in affairs and a hurried change in the place of business as well as of residence. Whatever the occurrence, it may be abrupt and unforeseen. It may bring travel. While there may be many annoyances and perplexities, yet the general forecast is for success and financial returns. In domestic, social and affectional matters adverse conditions may hold sway.

Those whose birthday it is may look forward to an interesting year with important change, removal and travel, which may result successfully and with financial return despite, if the dog barks, go in—if the female dog barks, go out.

Times Do Change And Isn't It a Good Thing?

Compare a newspaper of to-day with one of ten, twenty, fifty (as many as you like) years ago. Isn't the change good? Would a fifty-year-old newspaper (or a twenty-year-old one) meet to-day's demands?

No it wouldn't! How could it?

There are hundreds of times as many readers as there were even a few years ago. There are thousands and thousands of opportunities offered the readers through the newspapers—because the newspaper is the logical medium. The classified advertisement column of the average to-day newspaper takes more space than the whole newspaper of a few years ago. That is because the great need is to reach the greatest number of people, and the success of this newspaper as a medium for reaching the greatest number of people is established. It is as near and convenient as your telephone. Remember that.

Immediately upon finding a need for HELP, turn to our Classified advertisement, or, send us the facts and through these Classified Servers you will get what you want. How much easier that is than it was a few years ago.

YOUR newspaper has grown up to meet your need and SERVE you.
