Mrs. W. P. Wilgar, Mack street, entertained at the tea hour on Tuesday for Miss Mary Strange who is a much-feted bride elect. Pink tulips gave a spring like touch to the pretty rooms where the hostess made the tea, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Harold Drinkwater, Orillia. A blue basket containing a huge Easter egg adorned with a bunny bride and groom and filled with dainty handkerchiefs was presented to the guest of honor amid much merry laughter. The guests included Mrs. H. E. Richardson, Mrs. J. F. Preston, Miss Rhoda Wurtel, Miss Helen Rogers, Miss Jean Duff, Miss Helen Strange, Miss Cecily Rutherford, Miss Jean Craig, Miss Eva Martin, Miss Harriet Gardiner and Miss Doris and Miss Gwendolen Folger.

Much regret is felt in Kingston at the news that General King and Mrs. W. B. Shuttleworth King are being transferred to London, Ont. Since his appointment to the command of this district General King and his wife have made "The Tower House" a centre of kindly hospitality and on their departure Kingston will lose a most charming host and hostess.

Miss Gertrude Martin, Balacava street, was the hostess at a china shower and tea on Monday afternoon for Miss Helen Doolan, a bride of next week. Mrs. E. Cousins poured tea at the attractive tea table centred with bridal roses. The guests were admitted by Miss Eleanor and Miss Winnifred Martin, two daintily frocked little maids.

attend the annual meeting in Brantford. Miss Ardath Hardy, who spent the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. C. B. S. Harvey, Union street, returned to Haverhill Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday.

VICTIM OF CEPTID
Mr. and Mrs. Stanley G. Tobin, of Edmonton, whose marriage the other day was the result of a whirlwind courtship in the provincial legislature buildings. Mr. Tobin is M.P.P. for Leleuc. When he came to attend the session at Edmonton, he met Miss Greta Adele Playler, a solicitor in the attorney-general's department. It didn't take much persuasion for Miss Playler to drop her law work and become Mrs. Tobin.

TO-DAY'S FASHION

By Vera Winston.

Black Crepe Braid Offsets the Trim Lines of This White Crash Knicker Suit.

The much-talked-of knicker suit is being developed in interesting materials for spring, and suits which still adhere to only two pieces are rather the exception than the rule. Of oyster-white crash, the suit above adds smartness in offsetting its trim lines by black binding. The jaunty skirt, when removed to reveal the knickers underneath, may be thrown over the shoulders as a card.

An Engagement Announcement Luncheon. One of the first things a girl thinks about after accepting "Mr. Right" is how to announce her engagement to her friends. One way of doing this, is to give a luncheon to her girl friends for that purpose.

If the announcement luncheon is to be a very informal affair, the engaged girl may send out her invitations, written on ordinary note paper and reading: "Dear Mary: I would love to have you lunch with me on Wednesday next at one o'clock. I am asking some of the other girls, too, and hope you can come, with love, Helen." Or the invitation may be delivered by the engaged girl face to face, or over the telephone.

If the affair is to be a more formal one, however, the mother of the engaged girl should write the invitations, as follows: "Dear Mary: I am asking a few of Helen's friends to luncheon on Wednesday, May the third, at one o'clock, and I would like to have you among them. Hoping that you can be with us, Cordially yours, Alice Dean Grey."

If possible, the reason for giving the luncheon should not be allowed to slip out in any way. But it frequently happens that the engaged girl's friends suspect that they have been invited to hear a "deep, dark secret"—and, luckily, this thrill of uncertainty often infuses the little gathering with so much excitement and delightful anticipation, that the luncheon is an assured success from the outset.

When the guests arrive they find the dining table decorated most attractively. A small doll dressed as a postman stands in the middle of the table, with a small bag on his back. From this mail bag hangs as many pieces of pink baby-ribbon as there are guests present; the ends of these ribbons extend to each guest's plate.

A wreath of pink arbutus (or any other small flower) combined with the green of the asparagus fern, surrounds this small mail man. The favors, which lie at each place, consist of "Engagement" note-books with pink silk covers. (These are easily made by the hostess by simply covering two pieces of card-board with pink moire silk—or with pink satin ribbon covered with gold or silver net and a lace edging to match; ordinary lined pads are pasted inside the two pink covers). A pink flower is folded inside the luncheon-napkin.

When all are seated, the hostess explains to her guests that "The letter carrier has a small envelope for each of us." She then asks each one to pull at the pink ribbon which extends to her plate. When they do this, they find that a tiny piece of paper folded in the shape of an envelope flies out of the bag on the little man's back. These letters are numbered on the back, and the girls are asked to open their letters in turn and read them aloud. In the succession which the numbers indicate, Letter 1, reads "Mary"; letter 2 contains the word "is"; letter 3 reads "engaged"; the fourth letter says "to"; the fifth letter, "John." (If there are more than five guests present, the sentence may be made longer by adding sur-names. The menu is:

Stuffed Olives
Chicken a la King
Pineapple Salad
Coffee with Whipped Cream
Caramel Ice Cream
"Kisses"
Nuts and Bonbons

To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

THURSDAY, APRIL 20TH.

This promises to be a day of unsettled and perplexing conditions according to the contradictory planetary configurations. While the financial outlook is of an encouraging nature, at the same time there is a presage of fraud, deception and conspiracy and other abortive and malicious influences. Opportunity for a beneficial change may present itself, but this should be embraced with the above possibility in mind. In domestic, social and affectional matters there is also a threatening augury.

Those whose birthday it is have the augury of a year of treachery and subtle attack, although the financial prospects are fortunate. With caution, affairs may be directed into channels. Guard the domestic circle against danger. A child born on this day may have a rather checkered career, and may do best in the employment of others, where it will be safeguarded against treach-ery and fraud. It will be popular and generous, though disposed to be careless and untidy unless carefully trained.

When Renovating Clothes

First, remove all stains on garments.
An iron that is too hot fades colors.
Always press before the first creases are eliminated.
Never use a light colored cloth in pressing dark clothes, as the white lint shows and is hard to remove.
Wring cloth in hot water, as cold water cools your iron too much.
Never rub as in ironing, but lay the iron on and move slowly and gently over the garment.
The more you rub the more your garment shines.
If an old piece of trouser cloth or any worn-out is spread over serge (or other material which shines easily) much of the usual gloss is suppressed and the garment pressed has an unusually satisfactory appearance.
Wet velvet, silk or satin very slightly, as heat and wet spoil these materials. Press lightly till dry.
