For Having a Whiskey Still
—Thomas Barrett Is Heavily Fined.

The hunt for whiskey stills is still on. In police court on Tuesday morning, Thomas Barrett, who had a still in full blast in the heart of the city, was given a hard blow. On the charge of unlawfully having in his possession a still suitable for manufacturing spirits, contrary to section 180 of the Inland Revenue act, he was fined $200 and costs and one month, or in default six months in jail. On a charge of "having liquor for sale" Barrett was touched for $200 and costs or three months, sentences to run concurrently.

Barrett was taken into custody as a result of a visit paid to his home at the corner of Princess and Montreal streets, on Friday by License Inspector William McCammon, and Provincial Constable Clark. The still confiscated is regarded as a masterpiece in workmanship. Barrett says he is not a tinsmith, but at any rate he is certainly a handy man at manufacturing stills.

Constable Clark and License Inspector McCammon told of finding the still, a small quantity of liquor and a half dozen or so empty bottles and some corks. Barrett admitted having the still, but denied having liquor for sale. He declared that he had not sold any liquor. All that he made was for his own use.

Constable Clark told of when the station he had with Barrett when the latter said that he had not worked since last fall, that he could not get a job and that he had to do something.
