What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

Tonight "The House of Lies." Have any of your daughters ever taken a trip and disappeared before reaching their destination? No, of course not, but just because you have been fortunate in this respect, do not think that others have not lost daughters and even wives by the insidious "white slave traffic."

"BILLY" MATHESON IS IN KINGSTON

Will Conduct Revival Services Here Until First of July - Big Man in Every Way.

"Billy" Matheson, the big man who has an international reputation as a preacher and conductor of revival services, has arrived in Kingston to take on sin and the devil for some strenuous rounds, and, if he has any measure of the success here that has been his in other places, then his opponents are due for a terrible licking.

The famous preacher is a big man and must have been a terror in his prize-fighting days or in tussles in lumber camps in his younger days. Yet withal, he has a gentle manner which would win the heart of the most cynical or hardened.

His meetings in this city will commence at the Griffin theatre on Sunday afternoon next, the first one being at three o'clock and the second at eight-fifteen. Sunday meetings thereafter will all be held in this theatre and at these hours.

A Very Gentle Hint

Now, one uncle of the children was generous and the other was close. Uncle Number One, however, was not satisfied with his own generosity. He wished Number Two to know and feel the joy of giving particularly to his own nephews and nieces.

CAST OFF BURDEN

Load of Thirty Years Lifted From Woman's Heart.

Attempted Restitution of Sum of Money Which She Had Found and Kept When in Dire Extremity Filled Her With Joy.

"Thank God, I have found you at last. I must see you." It was the quavering voice of an old woman, conscience stricken for 30 years because she had kept $100 that did not belong to her and now able to pay with her dead son's insurance money.

She was speaking over the telephone in Philadelphia to D. E. Irving, head of Irving & Lelper, cotton, Chester. "But I do not know you," he said, speaking from his mill. "Why do you want to see me?"

"I owe you money," said the woman. Her insistence caused him to agree to meet her in Broad street station, where she was to wear a shawl over her left arm and hold a bag in her right hand as marks of recognition.

The manufacturer met her. With her was a younger woman. Thirty years ago, she told him, she was walking in Philadelphia when she saw a man dropping a wallet.

She described the man. It was a close description of James Irving, Mr. Irving's father, who died years ago and who was heir of James Irving & Sons, wool manufacturers, Irvington.

"I picked up the wallet," the woman said. "It contained a $100 bill and two pennies. There was also a card in it. I do not remember all that was on the card. But I remember the name 'Irving' and 'wool merchant'."

"I had lost my husband only three months before. I did not know how to pay the rent. I had no shoes for my children. I was horribly tempted. And I did not resist. I did not overtake the owner of the wallet. I kept the money."

"But ever since then it has been on my mind, on my conscience. There was not a day that I did not think of that money. There was not a night that I did not ask God in my prayer to forgive me. It was the only dishonest thing I ever did."

"I kept the wallet and the card with me ever had. Please, please, sir, take it," she said, as she stretched out her hand. She held five $20 bills.

When Mr. Irving asked her how she had found him she told him she had telephoned to hundreds of "Irving's" in the last three months. She telephoned to Irvings in Philadelphia, Wilmington and even in Pittsburgh and New York, but always received the same curt reply:

"You must have the wrong parj." When Mr. Irving told the woman he could not accept the money because he did not know that his father ever lost it, she nearly broke down. She begged him to take it.

"Don't you please take this terrible load off my heart at last!" The manufacturer promised her to ask his oldest sister if she remembered the occurrence. But his sister remembered it only vaguely if at all. And Mr. Irving wrote a letter to the woman asking her to favor him by accepting the $100 as a gift.

The name of the woman, who lives in Tioga, was not disclosed.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Conversion doesn't mean repudiation of debts contracted when a sinner. A religious man should start with the intent to pay all obligations. We would rather listen to the man who always thinks what he says than listen to the man who always says what he thinks.
