REX COMPANY CLOSING ITS SEASON SATURDAY

Presenting "The House of Lies" at Grand For Week-End.

The Grand Opera House was crowded on Thursday evening to witness "The House of Lies," which is the last production which the popular Rex Stock Company will offer for the approval of Kingston audiences this season. When it was learned last week that the Rex players would finish their engagement in Kingston on May 13th, their many patrons made sure that they had no other engagements for one of the last three days of this week.

"The House of Lies" is an altogether different play to any which the company has staged in the city during its engagement. It is a story of the "underworld" in a large American city, and the best way to appreciate this production is to witness it as it is impossible to describe it adequately. The play brings home to the audience how necessary it is at this time to do all possible to protect young womanhood as the agents of the White Slave traffic are ever at work.

The leading roles are played by "Rex" Snelgrove, Zana Vaughn, Florence Winters, William Seymour and William Yule. The second act is very exciting, when a fight takes place between "Rex" and "Billy" Seymour, when Rex rescues two girls. The acting of all the members of the cast was exceptionally good. During the intermission William Seymour and Hazel Williams appeared and gave a delightful number, and were loudly applauded. The Park Kiddies who are always a welcome addition to the performances, rendered a song and dance number which were warmly received.

Between the second and third acts, Rex Snelgrove, the popular manager of the company, took occasion to thank those present for their patronage, not only for Thursday night's presence, but for their attendance during their long engagement in the city. "Rex" said that it was a "perfectly wonderful" season for himself and the members of the company. They have all had a good time socially, and business has been so good that he is coming back again early next fall. Mr. Snelgrove said that he would rather be in Kingston than any place, as he has made so many friends, and will miss them during his absence.

Mr. Snelgrove took occasion to thank D. P. Branigan, manager of the Opera House, the stage crew, the ushers, and all the staff for the courtesy shown him during the time that he has been among them. "Rex" said that it is seldom, if ever, that a company can get along so well with a manager. In closing, he did not forget to say some nice things about the treatment which he had received from the Kingston press.

The Rex Stock Company has established a record which is a credit to any theatrical organization, that of playing in a city of 25,000 people for nine months, and then being able to come back again for the next season. There were those who remarked when it was announced that there was going to be a stock company play in Kingston for one full season. "Oh, they will only stay a few weeks." But they reckoned without "Rex" and his players. The popularity of this company has increased to such an extent during its stay in this city, that people from far and near come to Kingston for the purpose of witnessing their productions.

Rex Snelgrove was only in Kingston a very short time, until he showed an interest in other things besides "feathering his own nest." He joined the Rotary Club, and immediately became an active member. During the winter months Mr. Snelgrove showed an interest in the children who were not quite as fortunate as some others, by lending his assistance in obtaining money for the boot and shoe fund under the auspices of the Rotary Club. There are children in Kingston who can thank Rex Snelgrove for the pair of shoes which they received, and are now able to attend school. The soldiers who are receiving treatment in the Sydenham and Mowat hospitals are grateful to "Rex" and his company for entertaining them, and are sorry to hear that he is leaving the city for a while.

Mr. Snelgrove is fortunate indeed in having for his life partner, Zana Vaughn; everybody admires and loves her, and we think "Rex" would say this himself, "with-out his charming 'opposite' the plays would not have been quite just what they were.

William Seymour and Hazel Williams, who are also a happy wedded couple, have certainly added "pep" to the performances by their exceptional acting, and also their vaudeville numbers, which are always enjoyed. Florence Winters is without doubt a very capable character actress as she has shown by the many difficult parts which she has portrayed. William F. Mitchell and Gloria Machan have always done justice to any roles which have been assigned to them.

Blanche Park and her two talented children, "The Park Kiddies," have been favorites from the first night the company opened in Kingston. Although these children have put on a vaudeville number every week for nine months they have grown more popular from week to week.

Wm. Yule—well, we're proud of "Bill"—he is a Kingston boy, and his acting does us credit. He's certainly a splendid comedian. A. J.

Cole, or "Doc," as he is known to his friends, will be greatly missed, as his genial countenance nearly always greeted the audience at the door. The roles which he was called upon to fill were a credit to him. Last, but not least, we did not always have the pleasure of seeing Charles Hannah, but when we did we were delighted.

One of the drawing features in connection with the plays of the Rex Stock Company was the excellent scenery and electrical effects; no money was spared in staging the productions.

Most of the members of the company will spend their vacation far away, but rumor has it that D. P. Branigan's "fish stories" have attracted our friend "Rex" to such an extent that he has decided to remain around here to see if he has anything in the line of bait which will attract the Frontenac county fish. However, whether he spends his holiday "here" or "there" we will be delighted to welcome him back in the fall, as "Rex" has indeed proven himself to be a "King" during his stay in the Limestone City.

"The House of Lies" will be produced again Friday evening and Saturday matinee and night.

TRIAL AT JUNE SESSIONS.

Young Men Accused of Assaulting a Queen's Student.

A young man who has been confined to the county jail for some days without trial on the charge of assaulting a Queen's student in Macdonald Park about two weeks ago, was released on bail on Thursday. When the man, who was taken to the county jail, was unable to obtain the $500 bail, which was demanded by the crown attorney, he asked to be tried before Judge La-veil, in chambers. When he appeared, he elected to be tried, and the judge was arranging for a date of trial when the bail which was demanded, was secured, and the man was allowed his freedom. The five young men will now appear at the sitting of the county court before Judge Madden, on June 13th. Four of the men were released on bail after the police court proceedings.
