If a portrait could speak what would Great-great-grandmama's picture say to Granddaughter who sits before her to talk it over? Would she coldly stare right over the cigarette-pretending not to see it or the rouged cheeks and the scanty skirts and haughtily refuse to express her real opinion? Or would she answer the whispered confidence. "I love Jack, but should I give up lots of the things I like, just to marry him?" Would Greatgreat-grandmama's portrait say-well, what would she say?
