What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

"A Game Chicken" Novel Picture Several striking novelties are featured in "A Game Chicken," Bebe Daniels' new picture at the Allen Theatre, commencing Monday. It is a pioneer among comedy-dramas, dealing with the boot-legging "industry." There are fires at sea, bold bands of smugglers, Cuban ranchos and New England communities. You have a glimpse of the administration of a village Purty League, and also an exciting cockfight. Then, for the first time you see Bebe Daniels masquerading as a boy. She does her hair differently than ever before; in fact, some say that the real novelty of the picture is the fact that, for the first time in screen history, Bebe Daniels shows her ears! Pat O'Malley was excellent as leading man.

"Doubling for Romeo." Goldwyn's latest comedy, was written and produced with no other purpose in view than to inspire violent laughter. It is a lively and delicious satire on movie studios and movie people; it exposes the inner workings of a studio lot in full blast; it is a delightful burlesque of Shakespeare's "Romeo You must not miss "Doubling for Romeo" with the funniest role of his life. You must not miss "Doubling for Romeo," one of the two big attractions at the Allen commencing Monday.

Your Last Chance. Tonight gives you your last opportunity to see Pauline Frederick in "The Lure of Jade," which is showing at The Strand Theatre. This house will close tonight to re-open early in August after certain alterations have been made so if you miss tonight you will not have another chance to see the popular Paramount programme for several weeks. Episode Nine of "The Secret Four" will finish tonight as well and then there will be the Pathe News.

THE JUNIOR SESSIONS OF COMING CHAUTAUQUA

Will Greatly Interest the Boys and Girls of Kingston.

During Chautauqua week the junior sessions in the mornings will be a real community centre for the boys and girls of Kingston. Here under the direction of the Junior Leader and her assistants, the juniors will have the benefit of the latest ideas in organized play. Among the features of interest will be the "Junior Town." Here the children elect their own mayor and aldermen, and appoint the necessary dignitaries to carry on the business of the energetic community. All these positions are keenly sought after by the youthful citizens. In fact, next to the mayor the most coveted position is the chief of police, who is responsible for the observance of law and order during the junior sessions. Once the successful candidates are installed, the other activities commence. These include organized games, songs and stories, and at least one hike to some nearby point. Then on the sixth day the boys and girls will present their pageant, "The Conquest of Peace." This makes possible the appearance of all the junior members dressed in the national costumes of the various nations, and is a fitting climax to the "six joyous days" for the juniors.

AGRICULTURAL ADVISORY COUNCIL IS DESIRABLE

County Council Holds Over Matter of Sharbot Lake Continuation School.

A. W. Sirett, district agricultural representative, addressed the County Council on Friday afternoon on the question of appointing a Frontenac agricultural advisory council in order that the representative might secure more co-operation from the people of the county in transacting matters in their interests. The proposal is made through the Minister of agriculture for Ontario. Mr. Sirett thanked the reeves for the aid given him in promoting the rural school fairs.

With regard to the request of an Oso deputation for a continuation school at Sharbot Lake, the committee on education recommended that the question be laid over until the November session of the council, and that in the meantime the ratepayers send in the petition to have S.S. No. 3, Oso, set apart from the Sydenham high school district. It also recommended that Councillor Sproule be invited to attend the deputation to attend the Secondary Education conference in Toronto on July 5th and 6th. Councillor Hamilton asked for information as to how Wolfe Island was set apart from the Sydenham High School district. Dr. Spankie replied that a petition was signed by over two-thirds of the ratepayers, asking that the municipality be set apart. Wolfe Island, then established a continuation school but found it a failure. Now the trustees were trying to re-establish it.

The property committee reported that the matter of alterations of the room for Judge Lavell was considered and it was decided that an exchange of rooms should be made with the Sheriff. The matter of adjustment was left in the hands of councillors Sibbett and Halliday. The committee recommended that the price of six-inch tile made in the jail should be reduced from fifty to thirty-five cents, but no change made in the prices of other sizes. It decided to leave the matter of repairs to the jail wall in the hands of Councillors Sibbett and Halliday and the jail governor, and repairs to the court house and registry office in the hands of Chairman Sibbett. It was recommended that the tender of the P. Walsh Coal company for coal for the county buildings be accepted, it being the lowest, at $15.47 a ton. The roads and bridges Committee gave Councillors Hamilton and Storms authority to have repairs made to the Long Swamp bridge in Portland township. The committee will examine Cross Lake bridge to determine the repairs required. Owing to the increased cost of education, the committee stated that there were no funds available to be apportioned for road grants this year.

Councillor Clarke asked if it was wise to appoint a high constable by a by-law at this time. It was rumored that the new Sheriff would be also high constable and if the county accepted him, the government would pay the salary. It was decided to allow the present appointment by motion to remain and omit the passing of the by-law. Councillors Clark and Sibbett moved that the council pay the law costs in connection with the hearing of the Provincial highway case before the Ontario Municipal Board. They claimed that the townships were forced to become defendants in the case. On the suggestion of Councillor Shankie the matter was referred to the finance committee for report. Councillor Hamilton said that Councillor Clarke had been preaching economy and he was somewhat surprised that Councillor Clarke should have made Kingston township a defendant in the road case and incurred law costs when the township was fully protected by the Ontario Municipal Board. Councillor Sproule replied that there was nothing else to do but to engage counsel, to represent the two townships when the county council as a whole was trying to saddle the whole cost of the highway upon the two municipalities.

The council held its concluding session on Saturday morning. On motion of Councillors Sibbett and Spankie the council decided to form itself into an advisory agricultural council for a conference with the district representative, A. W. Sirett, during its November session. The motion's allowance committee was re-appointed on motion of Councillors Sproule and Clark. It consists of the county clerk, Councillor Truscott, John Pollie, Mrs. W. S. Gordon and Mrs. J. L. F. Sproule. The committee was asked to report at the November session. A resolution was passed, on motion of Councillors Guthrie and Taylor, thanking Warden Drew for his entertainment of the council on Friday evening. The council adjourned until the 21st of November.

If there should be a profit from Chautauqua, July 1st to 7th, it will be used by the Rotary Club in community welfare work. It could be used to no better purpose. Therefore support it. Folks Back Home By Robert Quillen

Uncle Gus. "I been a settin' here," said Uncle Gus, as I joined him under the water oak that stood in front of his boarding house, "a-thinkin' about gettin' old. An' as I look back, it seems to me that wisdom is mostly the product o' sore spots. When I was a little feller, I was a plum-fool about green apples. I knowed they'd give me the berry ache, but it seemed like I couldn't keep from eatin' 'em. But long experience with colic fin'ly taught me sense, an' now I don't banker for 'em. "I always think o' them green apples when I sees folks doin' wrong. The' ain't no man livin' what don't know right from wrong; but when a feller's young, wrong seems kind of excitin' an' right seems kind o' dull, an' he does a heap o' things he is ashamed of. Doin' wrong gits him in trouble an' leaves him with a lot o' sore spots to nag at him in his old age, an' then he says he's learned wisdom. "Well, I reckon he has. But he pays a heap o' his schoolin'. I'm right sorry folks ain't born with sense, but I reckon it ain't reasonable to expect youngsters to know fire's hot until they git blistered."

persons who might find life insipid and dull without it. Volumes have been written for and against the proposition that veterans of the great war should receive additional compensation. Much ink has been spilled in the effort to prove that the country can't afford it in any case. As to the first contention, if the highest wages ever paid to soldiers didn't commercialize patriotism, further payment cannot corrupt or degrade it. As to the second, the richest nation in the world can afford to do anything it desires. But these arguments miss the point entirely. If the doughboy is entitled to nothing more than he has received, he should be paid no more, though the treasury vaults burst with hoarded wealth. If he is entitled to more, the country must pay and discharge its obligation, though tax burdens be doubled. And that's all there is to that.

him. Somehow he seems a little crude and unpolished for a girl who is facing a career. Class. The great are besieged. They are hedged about with reserve as a protection against meddlers and prying persons who have more curiosity than good manners. This self-imposed ostracism keeps them lonely, but it is their only hope of freedom. Because of it, the public assumes that the great are a peculiar breed, living apart in solitary grandeur because they have little in common with ordinary folk. And when some enterprising photographer or writing man gives us an intimate view of the private lives of these elect, we are astonished to find them in all particulars much like ourselves. Only in story books are the great haughty and terrible. True, there are mediocre men whom the tide of circumstances has washed into high position; and these, being conscious of their mediocrity, assume haughty airs alike to bolster their own courage and to impress their betters. But those in whom the fire of greatness burns feel no need of lordly airs as adjuncts to their greatness. Only the coward need bluster. Only one whose pockets are thinly lined thinks it necessary to make a show of spending. Only the knave feels an urge to tell the world that his word is as good as his bond. Only the hypocrite uses pety as a window display. Break down their protective reserve and you will find the great "our kind of folks." The proud gentleman who stares you coldly in the eye is a dry goods clerk; the haughty dame who appears to scorn this commonplace world is a lady's maid on her vacation.

But no more butcher boy! "He sent a note asking to come over tonight," said the girl, "but I refused."

THE GIRL ACROSS THE STREET.

Sitting all day in porch swing, with only a sprained ankle for company, has persuaded the girl across the street to think of serious things and dream dreams of a career. In one of the three-years-for-fifty-cent magazines she found an advertisement with the alluring headline: "Writers of Popular Songs Make Fabulous Sums." The text of the advertisement made it clear that any person possessed of sufficient wit to read can write songs that will delight the world, and concluded with the generous offer: "You furnish the words we'll furnish the music." After much wrinkling of brows and chewing of pencils, she completed her first song and dispatched it laden with a special delivery stamp. Monday the reply came. For the sum of $43.50, payable in advance as the girl's share of the expense, the publishers agreed to equip her verse with music, print it in three colors, and deliver copies to a world of music lovers that appeared to be waiting at the door. For so small a sum may one purchase fame! Tuesday morning the money was sent, and Tuesday afternoon the girl called Daughter across the street to hear the great news. To be a song writer—to be dined and feted—to travel and own a fine car—to be sought out by distinguished gentlemen a little gray at the temples and perhaps with a romantic scar across their cheeks. Oh, it would be wonderful! But no more butcher boy! "He sent a note asking to come over tonight," said the girl, "but I refused."

Aunt Het "I lot o' folks go through life miserably because they do too much wishin' and not enough askin' for what they want."

Muddy Waters. When the American people are required by circumstances to solve any problem, political or economic, it is their habit to muddy the waters with sentimentalism, divide themselves into hostile camps, indulge in much abuse and recrimination, and thus delay the finding of a solution until their vocabularies are exhausted. This waste of energy is inevitable in republics, and is excusable only because it provides entertainment for
