A MEMORIAL TO A GREAT EXPLORER

Trading post and fort of Indian days, with stockade and bastions, to be erected on the shore of Lake Windermere, B.C., near where David Thompson built Kootenai House, the first trading post established west of the Rockies.

MENTION of the name of David Thompson would convey little meaning to the average Canadian, and yet no one did more in his day to open up new trade routes through the hitherto unknown defiles of the Canadian Rockies and to apply scientific map making to the geographical exploration of the West.

The Play Man's Games

POISON STICK By EMMETT D. ANGELL Dear Sneaky: No more school and I wish I was old enough to get a job but they won't let boys as small as me work except errands or clean up yards or things like that. I don't see why they won't let boys get jobs. It wouldn't be any worse than doing things at home like beating rugs and cleaning up the basement. I don't see much sense in vacations if a guy can't get a job or go some where. I read about two boys who were walking from way out west some where to New York and Tubby says he thought we would like to do that. We planned all about it and what we would take and everything. We could sleep in barns and even out on hay stacks. Tubby is a good fighter and I wouldn't be afraid either. If you see us come to your place don't be surprised. It's a secret, so don't tell anybody. We may run away and do it. I would too, only another might worry and Tubby says he go, or leave a note anyway. We could work in places doing things for our meals and we would see the world. I guess we wouldn't have things to tell the other kids when we got back! Oh no! And I guess it would make them kind of sore. At least it would. All for he is always talking about the big things he's going to do. Gee, I almost was going to say goodbye and not tell you the game of Poison Stick. This is a kind of roughhouse one we play and all you need is four Indian Clubs to play it. You put the four clubs on the ground about three feet apart. All the kids grab hands and form a circle. Then you begin pulling and pushing and dragging, trying to make some kid knock over a club. If a kid knocks over a club he has to sit up again and this up till only one fellow is left. Or there's another way to play it and that is to have half the kids when they form the circle every other one is on one team so that puts each kid between two of the enemy and he is between two of the enemy too. And then you play the same way and the game ends when all of one team has knocked clubs down. Don't tell anybody what I told you. Your friend, yours truly. CHIP.
