WHAT HAS BECOME OF FORMER CHAMPS?

If Jack Dempsey should drop his title, say to Harry Wills, what would become of him?

After a champion loses out, generally he disappears. Few can tell where now are the ring heroes of yesterday. Some are dead. Some are down and out, dependent on friends for lunch money. A few, who were cautious with their coin when the getting was good, are men of affluence.

A check-up of former champions still living shows this:

Bantamweight—Joe Bowker, bookmaker in England; Johnny Coulon, selling jewelry in Chicago; Harry Forbes, boxing instructor, also in Chicago; Jimmy Walsh, another boxing instructor, in Boston; Pete Herman, Joe Lynch and Kid Williams, still fighting in the ring that once knew them as titleholders in their division.

Featherweight—Abe Attell, shoe store proprietor in New York; Young Corbett, billiard hall owner and fight referee in Denver; Tommy Sullivan, fight promoter in St. Louis.

Lightweight—Frank Erne, broker in New York; Kid Lavings, lumber dealer in Saginaw, Mich.; Jack McAuliffe, manager of Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight, newspaper writer and persistent digger after hopes; Battling Nelson, still following the ring; Willie Ritchie, wealthy and in the real estate business in San Francisco; Freddie Welsh, owner of physical culture school at Summit, N.J.; Ad Wolgast, in Venice, Cal., where a benefit recently was given for him.

Welterweight—Johnny (Kid) Alberts, running pool room at Elizabeth, N.J.; Ray Bronson, fight promoter in Toledo, O.; Rube Ferns, organizer for United Mine Workers, Scammon, Kan.; Jimmy Gardner, cigar store proprietor and boxing instructor, Boston; Kid Graves, fight manager, Omaha; Ted (Kid) Lewis, still in the ring; Kid McCoy, movie actor in California; Matty Matthews, doorman at New York Hippodrome; Honey Melody, navy yard worker, Charlestown, Mass.; Tommy Ryan, real estate man, Syracuse, N.Y.; Mysterious Billy Smith, preacher in Portland, Ore.; Mike (Twin) Sullivan, trucking business, Boston; Joe Walcott, pin setter in Boston bowling alley.

Middleweight—Jimmy Clabby, still in the ring, in New Zealand; George Chip, miner, Newcastle, Pa.; Al McCoy, chicken business, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Kid McCoy, movie actor, California; Mike O'Dowd, still in the ring; Billy Papke, raising oranges, Pasadena, Cal.; Cyclone Johnny Thompson, chief of police, Sycamore, Ill.

Heavyweight—Tommy Burns, fight promoter in England; James J. Corbett, actor and news feature writer; James J. Jeffries, farmer and oil man, Burbank, Cal.; Jack Johnson, giving boxing exhibitions on the stage; Marvin Hart, Louisville, Ky., police force; Jess Willard, farmer and oil man.

WHERE HAVE THE SOUTHPAWS GONE?

Bill Bally the Only Good One to Break into the Majors in Two Years.

Written by Billy Evans.

What is becoming of the southpaw pitchers?

The other day, while discussing pitching in the major with a couple of the National League umpires, I remarked:

"What good looking left-handed pitchers broke into your league this year?"

"None," replied one of the arbiters.

"Billy Bally is the best looking left-hander that has broken into the league in a couple of years" replied the other.

That struck me as rather interesting since Billy Bally has his chance in the American League for three or four seasons, then dropped back into the minors.

For about ten years he was shunted around in the bushes, only to come back last season with the St. Louis Cardinals for his second big chance in the majors.

Here was a fellow who had been pitching for 15 years, coming back for his second chance, and being classed as about the best looking southpaw that has debuted in the National League for a couple of years.

Conditions in the American League have been very much similar, although perhaps not quite as bad as expressed by my brother umpires of the National.

Southpaws of the Nehf-Cooper style or the Waddell-Plank standard are certainly few and far between. All of which brings us back again to the remark:

Only Two Southpaws.

"What about the southpaws? Are they becoming extinct?"

Last fall the St. Louis Browns of the American League gave 11 players for Dave Danforth. This further tends to show the scarcity of southpaws, because Danforth previously had two trials in the American League.

Of all the southpaw recruits tried out in the spring by the eight American League clubs, only two have shown up to advantage. I have reference to Fred Heimach of the Athletics and Herb. Pruett of the St. Louis Browns.

Heimach has turned in several mighty good games for the Athletics. He was a 13-inning victory to his credit over "Red" Faber and a 4 to 3 win over the veteran Bob Shawkey. He has promise.

This fellow Pruett of the Browns threatens to be a much talked about young man before the season is over. Possibly the chances of the Browns to win the American League pennant may to a certain extent depend on this college southpaw.

Set Maximum Salary For Female Teachers

Cobalt, July 1.—The Cobalt public school board has set a maximum salary of $1,300 for female teachers, and increases of $50 were granted to those teachers who have not yet reached that figure. The board has decided to reduce the staff by one teacher for the next term. St. Patrick's separate school will require another teacher, and an additional room will be built to accommodate the increased attendance.

Woman 82 Years Old Takes Third Husband

Quebec, July 1.—A despatch from Theford Mines yesterday announces the marriage of Mrs. P. Cole, of St. Alphonse de Theford, at the age of 82 years. This is Mrs. Cole's third trip to the matrimonial altar, her two husbands having predeceased her. Yesterday she married J. Marceau, who although younger than the bride, has attained the age of 70 years.

Cameron to Face Trial

Montreal, July 1.—The case of Colin C. Cameron, former partner of the firm of Thornton, Davidson & Company, defunct stock brokers, who is charged with stealing $500,000 and with falsifying the firm's books to the extent of another $500,000, was postponed until the September term of the Court of King's Bench. The failure of Thornton, Davidson & Company hastened the collapse of the Merchants Bank.

UNEARTH'S DRUG HAUL ON ANOTHER CHASE

When Prescott Sheriff Hunted Alleged Counterfeiters He Captured Cocaine.

Ottawa, July 1.—When Sheriff Wright, of L'Original, Prescott county, went after three men in a car on Wednesday, whom he suspected of trying to pass counterfeit money, he found, not counterfeit money but $3,000 worth of cocaine. They had been seen trying to pass some large bank notes. This raised suspicion and the sheriff attempted to intercept them. They got away, however, in a car and were not stopped till they had reached five miles east of Hawkesbury. Sheriff Wright had passed the word on to Chief of Police Groux, of Hawkesbury, who followed, and after a thrilling chase, arrested two of them, the other man getting away.

THIS CLERK SILENCES THE WEDDING BELLS

He Refuses Licenses to Those He Regards as Medically Unfit.

London, Ont., July 1.—Claiming that though the law does not specifically entitle him to exercise his own discretion, City Clerk Baker, in his official role as issuer of marriage licenses, is systematically pursuing a policy of rejecting the unfit. During the past few weeks, Mr. Baker has refused licenses to five couples and by so doing has incurred their wrath, but he declares he will not issue licenses in such circumstances without legal compulsion. Some of those refused have been advised to procure a medical certificate of fitness and have not returned, but Mr. Baker believes they have circumvented him by securing the necessary license in some other municipality.

Province Has Power To Enact Liquor Laws

Montreal, July 1.—The Quebec liquor law is entirely within the constitutional limits set by the British North America Act, passed 1867, it was held by Justice Bruneau in superior court yesterday, and the province has the right to enact any legislation for the control of the sale of liquor, even to imposing fines, punishments and incarceration to enforce its observance. This ruling was provoked by a large number of cases attacking the legality of the provincial liquor regulations.

Pittserry Events.

Pittserry June 30.—Hay, grain and gardens are looking fine in this vicinity. Miss Beattie Lane has returned home after spending the past week with relatives on Amherst Island. Mr. and Mrs. H. Johnson, Atkinson, and Mr. and Mrs. Button and family, Syracuse, N.Y., spent Sunday at H. Scott's. Owing to the rain on Tuesday evening, the play noon and evening was well attended. Entitled "The Neglected Husband," Bruce Ballantine has purchased a new Ford car. The ladies of the church, was postponed. Many from here are planning to attend the Dominion Chautauqua at Kingston from July first to seventh. The open air dance on J. A. McMaster's Sunday School convention held at lawn on Wednesday evening.
