Monday morning the local Hydro officials were notified to cut the power supply down almost one-half. The normal load of the Central Ontario System of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario is 24,000 horse-power, but to-day this was cut to 15,500 horse-power, and many of the Belleville industries had to close down in consequence of there not being enough electrical energy to go round.

The Dominion government controls the water supply under direction of the department of railways and canals and the Trent as a navigable waterway is supposed to be kept at certain levels. The storage lakes and dams are in charge of officials of the Dominion government, and the Hydro has no control over the water. The water dropped below level required and the Hydro station at Healey Falls was obliged to shut off two out of the three power units to comply with the government regulations in regard to levels.
