NEARLY DROWNED

George Smith Called to Douglas Carruthers Who Seized the Drowning Boy.

Dragged out of the water in front of the yacht clubhouse on Thursday afternoon just as he was going down for the third time, a young lad just escaped with his life. The youngster, who did not give his name, had donned his bathing suit and without being sure of his ability to swim had jumped off the wharf. He attempted to swim from one of the ladders to another but found the attempt too much for his strength. No companions were there to give him assistance, but George Smith, who happened to be sitting on the verandah, called Douglas Carruthers and the latter was able to seize the young boy just as he was going down. When brought to the surface the child's face had turned blue and he gasping heavily. Shortly afterwards, however, he was able to dress an return home.
