FAMOUS CROOK KILLED

"Liverpool Jack" Dies Alone in Tenement Room—A Criminal 50 Years.

New York, July 25.—Patrolman Arthur Loewe, shot four times just before dawn Saturday in a single-handed pistol battle with four safe crackers in South Brooklyn, died in Methodist Episcopal Hospital.

Loewe, an aviation veteran of the world war and a policeman of gallant record, struggled bravely to the end, aided by all that surgeons and nurses could do for him, but the four bullets which had drilled through his body proved too much for him.

And before he went Loewe had the satisfaction of knowing that as a result of the shots he fired in the dark yards behind H. L. Heberlein's warehouse in Brooklyn, one of the most notorious of crooks had preceded him.

When Loewe, summoned by Mrs. Marie Kennedy, of 253 Eighth street, who was awakened by her crying baby and saw two men scaling her back fence into the warehouse yard, had fought his fight with the pair and two who vaulted back over the fence to add them, there was nothing but a trail of blood to tell that he had not fought in vain.

All day long the police waited, certain that at least one gunshot case would show up somewhere. They were right. Saturday afternoon John Walsh, known to criminologists of two continents as "Liverpool Jack," left this life, down near the Navy Yard, four miles from where the pistol fight had taken place.

Just as soon after that as they could the police got word to Loewe that a man had been accounted for, that he was one who had preyed for more than fifty years with England and America as his chosen hunting grounds, a man whose business was safe cracking, whose list of aliases were overlong, who had spent more than thirty of his sixty-five years in prison and who, at the very moment when, twice wounded, he had dropped his burglar tools and fled with his pals, was badly wanted in Trenton.

Loewe died with all the consolation his family and his religion could give him. He will be buried with police honors, a hero who gave his life in the going of his duty.

The other man slunk away from the fight, hid himself in a tenement bedroom, staunchly his own wounds as best he might with tissue paper, refused the aid of either doctor or priest, drove away his sister-in-law, and died alone. His body was taken to the Kings County morgue for an autopsy.

If anger is not restrained, it is frequently more hurtful to us than the injury that provokes it. It is wiser to run away when there's no remedy than to stay and die in the field foolishly.

LOWER BIRTH RATE

Figures for England and Wales Show Falling Off.

People who fear that the country is over-populated will be consoled by the quarterly returns of births, marriages and deaths in England and Wales, just issued, remarks the London News. For the three months ended September 30 births registered numbered 214,850, or 10,466 fewer than in the preceding quarter and 15,017 fewer than in the corresponding period of 1920. Of the births 4,596 were illegitimate—751 fewer than in the same quarter last year.

About 6,000 more male babies were born than females, the figures being: Males, 110,056; females, 104,794. Male births were in proportion to female as 1,050 to 1,000, the average proportion in the ten preceding quarters being 1,044.

The births registered during the quarter correspond to an annual rate of 22.5 per 1,000.

Deaths for the three months numbered 99,134.

The natural increase of population in England and Wales last quarter by excess births over deaths was 115,716, against 54,256, 86,220 and 136,177 in the three quarters of 1918, 1919 and 1920.

The deaths registered in England and Wales last quarter were 9,337 fewer than in the preceding quarter, but 5,144 more than in the third quarter of 1920, and included 51,465 total males and 47,669 females. The total deaths correspond to an annual rate of 10.4 per 1,000 enumerated population.

Infant mortality, measured by the proportion of deaths under one year of age to registered births, was equal to 83 per 1,000, being 15 per 1,000 below the average in the ten preceding three quarters.

In the United Kingdom 282,953 births and 141,674 deaths were registered in the three months ended June 30 last. The natural increase of population was, therefore, 141,279.

The number of persons married during the three months ended June 30 was 142,582, a decrease of 9,392 from the number in the preceding quarter, and 7,754 fewer than in the second quarter of 1920. It corresponds to an annual rate of 15.1 per 1,000 population.

The number of persons married in the United Kingdom during the quarter ended June 30 was 172,908.

Choir Boys Want Increase.

Mercenary choristers are responsible for the present inclination to abandon or reduce the employment of boys in the most prominent of the London church choirs, and to substitute selected female voices from among various volunteers who gladly offer their services. Boys are not so prominent in the ordinary churches of the city of London, which have few visitors, and make up congregations from the families of adult choristers and other salaried officials of the church; but in the cathedrals and more important churches of Greater London musical services constitute the principal attractions.

Churches having the best music are St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, All Saints' Church, Margaret Street, the Temple and Chapel Royal, all of which maintain choir schools. Even then it is difficult to discover brilliant singers among the boys, who, it is declared by the London Chronicle, will only devote attention to practice if well paid for hymns, psalms and chants.

Richard J. C. Chanter, Mus.B., in whose care is the musical education of the 700 boys at University College School, believes that there is nothing to equal, for choir purposes, the perfect voice of a boy. "But among my 700 pupils," he said, "I have not been able to discover one whom I can regard as a possible choir boy of the perfect type."

"In the absence of a special school, the first thing a choirmaster has to do in the case of an ordinary boy is to teach him how to speak. Very often he has an accent which must be eliminated. Then he has to be taught how to sing, to understand music, to read it; and very likely he is a boy who can hardly read the words of the Psalms."

Royal Card Players.

The Prince of Wales has received a gift of a wonderful pack of cards, sent to him by an intimate friend.

They are hand-painted upon ivory, each of the Court cards being representative of a famous royal personage. It would not be wise to mention the subjects selected for the "knaves."

It is not likely that such a unique pack will ever be used in public; probably it will be locked away with another remarkable pack, once the property of King Edward, which was presented by the ex-kaiser, and was the work of a Berlin artist, who was reputed to have spent some months on the undertaking.

In this case the Court cards are represented by Kings, each face being composed of innumerable other faces—a really wonderful work of art. King George and Queen Mary are not interested in cards, and after the death of King Edward the pack was given to the prince at his special request.

The best card player of the royal family is the Duke of York, who delights in auction bridge.

Take From.

The teacher's patience was almost exhausted.

"Willie," she said, angrily, to a small boy at the foot of the class, "have I not told you before that you cannot take mules from oranges, or dogs from apples, or monkey-nuts from corkscrews, or—"

"But, teacher," ventured the culprit, "this morning I took a light from our fire and a bone from our dog."

Swaying of a Chimney. It is said that a well-built chimney, one hundred feet high, will sway from three to four inches in a high wind without danger of falling.
