Speaking of Candy

It has been said:

That the final judgment is reached after the candy has reached the mouth and the discriminating buyer will select, for the future, the Candy that can tickle the palate to his satisfaction.

This is one of "OH HENRY'S" strongest points. A trial will convince you.

HAVE YOU MET "OH MABEL?"

"Oh Henry's Little Sister."

STORM MERE NOTHING TO SAILING SISTERS

Mary, Margaret and Lois Taylor Ride Waves on Good Yacht Thistle.

A two column photograph of Principal R. Bruce Taylor's "Thistle" and of his three daughters, Mary, third year student at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, who does the main sheet work, Margaret, a dietitian who has been working at the Central Neighbourhood House, Toronto, and Lois, a second year student at Queen's University, both of whom do the forward work, appears in this column. An account of a trip the young ladies recently made down the St. Lawrence and from which they returned on Friday reads as follows:

In a storm, when waves of Lake Ontario lash against the yacht in their fury and on still, silent waters when scarcely a breath of wind comes to ripple the smooth surface, three sisters, Mary, Margaret and Lois Taylor, of Kingston, Ont., sail their yacht, the "Thistle."

Of course, like all true sailors they enjoy the first the best, and getting "acclimated" is more annoying to them than "topping the ball" in a round of golf, is to the golfer. And they are always at it. Morning, noon, and evening finds the trio on the water in their yacht and in regattas they have taken countless cups and have tasted of almost all the honors that a sailor loves.

Last week they took a cruise on their own account with a party of girls and from Kingston they set sail, going as far as Rockport on the Canadian side, and back on the American side. "From Alexandria Bay to Thousand Island Park we had to beat against the current, which is very swift," said Miss Mary. "And from the time we left Kingston the wind was against us and remained that way until we arrived at Rockport. Coming back it turned around most unkindly and we had to agitate us all the way home. But we had a wonderful time," she smilingly told us, "with no unpleasant experiences and no mishaps."

When Mary and Margaret Taylor were eleven and nine years old, they had their first lesson in sailing a yacht on the west coast of Scotland and since then have kept up the good sport. In the summer of 1914 in Canada, a large yawl, the "Ostris the Second," of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, was loaned them, and with the family for the crew, they took to Lake Champlain. After that they took many cruises and won two large silver cups at regattas at Burlington, Vermont, and West Point, New York.

Their first summer in Kingston was in 1918 and it was then that they bought the "Thistle"—"an old R. class boat," said Miss Mary. "Almost immediately we three sisters were allowed to take her out alone and whenever we wanted to. It was in this boat that we got our racing experience. Every summer until this year, father has had to go to England and so we managed the boat."

On such occasions Mary is the general skipper. But they also have a brother, R. F. Bruce Taylor, Jr., a graduate of Royal Military College, Kingston, who often applies for the job, as being a competent sailor is a trait of the Taylor family. Another sister, Miss Leslie Taylor, can also do anything on a yacht, but her time for the sport is limited as she is a clever violinist and spends most of her time in New York city, studying under an Italian master. But September she reserves solely for the sport, when she visits her family and practically lives on the water with them.

"It was daddy who taught us to sail," Miss Mary ventured, wishing to give all the honors unreservedly to her father, who is principal of Queen's University, Kingston. "He has brought us up to it from our infancy as his father before him did the same. Swimming is the only pre-requisite. After that we were always allowed to do anything we had a mind to in any sort of a boat."

WRITES FROM TICHBORNE.

W. H. Robson Explains About New Road Over His Property.

W. H. Robson, Tichborne, writing to the Whig, gives an explanation to the public regarding a new road that has been built across his property, without his having any knowledge whatever of the transaction.

The writer says that a government grant of $400 was received through W. D. Black, M.P.P., to be expended on the road from Tichborne village, leading to Sharbot Lake, and Thomas Swerbrick was appointed to make the layout. When he crossed the Eagle Creek bridge, he turned to the right, on the top of the hill and left the old established road known to the writer for forty years.

"This new road was built, and I was never consulted," Mr. Robson writes. "I did not know about it until July 22nd, when I was going for a load of hay for my neighbor. As soon as I could, I put up notices for the public not to trespass on my premises, without my permission, and left the timber in the road which had been cut on my property. On the night of July 26th, some person or persons took the notices and timber from my premises, and placed them across the old established road which might have caused some person's death. I say that the penalty should be severe on any person who would do the like. I put a wire fence across it until such times the said party come to me for settlement for the right of way and gravel. I am in favor of good roads and improving the country."

OBITUARY

The Late Mrs. Nicholson.

The sad death occurred at Gananoque last Wednesday of Mary Agnes Keating, relict of the late John Nicholson, who was in her ninety-second year. Mrs. Nicholson had been very active right to the last, having remarkable vitality for one of her years. She was predeceased by her husband by some years, and leaves to mourn her loss three daughters, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Cowan, 181 Division street, and Mrs. W. K. Crouter, Gananoque; and two sons, Thomas and Frank Nicholson, Portmouth.

The late Mrs. Nicholson was of Irish parentage, her parents leaving the old country for Canada some years previous to her birth in Montreal in 1832. When she was eleven years old, her parents moved to Portmouth, where for three-quarters of a century, she resided, and where she is dearly remembered. Early in life she was married to John Nicholson, from which union there were eleven children, of whom five survive.

The funeral service was conducted on Friday, at her late home, by Rev. R. W. Spencer, assisted by Rev. C. E. Kidd, while at the graveside Rev. Dean Dobbs assisted. The pallbearers were sons and grandsons of the deceased, Thomas and Frank Nicholson, "Ken" and Harold Nicholson and a son-in-law, W. K. Crouter. W. Edwards, Gananoque, was the undertaker.

The Late Bridget McCoy.

Mrs. Bridget McCoy passed away at the General Hospital on Tuesday after an illness of some duration. The deceased was a resident of the Home for the Aged. She was born in Ireland but spent most of her life in Canada. She was an Anglican, a member of St. George's cathedral. The funeral took place from S. S. Corbett's undertaking parlors to Catarqui cemetery this afternoon, Rev. Canon FitzGerald officiating.

PLANS FOR CURLING RINK

Were Taken Up at a Meeting Held on Tuesday Night.

At a general meeting of the Kingston Curlers Limited, held at the court house Tuesday evening, the report of the board of directors was received, showing the work done in connection with the corporation of the company, the preparation of the plans and the calling of tenders for construction of the building.

It was stated that it was first intended to use the steel frames from the old skating rink, but it called for too high a building, adding expense, and for other reasons, the idea was abandoned. Then plans for a six-sheet rink were made with the roof supported by steel trusses in one span. Tenders were received for this plan, but they reached nearly $40,000. The third set of plans calls for two rows of posts. The tenders received for these plans, added to the cost of the site, reached the sum of $50,000. At a previous meeting of the shareholders, the maximum was fixed at $25,000, so another meeting will have to be called to rescind the resolution or cut down the size of the rink. In the ten days that must elapse before such can be called, a special committee has been appointed to canvass for more shareholders.

Police Court Brevities.

A local doctor was fined $200 and costs in the police court on Wednesday morning for issuing prescriptions in contravention of the Ontario Temperance Act. Notice of appeal was given as the local vendor has no record of the prescriptions. John Cameron, charged with non-support of his wife, was dismissed until satisfactory evidence can be secured and opportunity for reparation presented.
