PROPOSED CONSTITUTION WAS UNDER CONSIDERATION

At Meeting of Summer School Students at Queen's on Thursday Night.

The summer school students at Queen's University held another business meeting Thursday evening and while it was intended to make it the last one, the discussion of business continued until it was found necessary to adjourn until Saturday evening. The principal item of business was regarding a proposed constitution and the students have been given an opportunity to consider the matter until Saturday evening, when they vote on the subject.

The report of the auditors appointed to audit the books of the Curis memorial fund committee reported very favorably, being generous in their commendation of the manner in which the books had been kept. The committee have the receipt of the treasurer of the university for the sum collected. The award of the scholarship will be made this year and the committees have been appointed and are at work considering the student of the graduating class to whom the award shall be made. The examination standing has also to be considered, so that it will be after the fall examinations before the announcement is made.

At the "social evening" in Grant hall to-night, the prizes won in the tennis tournament will be presented.

The final game in the ladies baseball schedule will be played Saturday afternoon at four o'clock, between the Eastern team and the Sydenham Street team. The result of the game will have no effect in deciding the winners of the group, as the series has been won by the West, who have won three games and lost one. The East and Sydenham Street have won one and lost two.

The members of this year's graduation class are meeting this afternoon to discuss the business relative to their graduation.

ASSAULTED HIS WIFE; BOTH EYES BLACKENED

James Willis Was Given His Last Chance by the Magistrate on Friday.

James Willis has been given his last chance by Magistrate Farrell. He was before the court on Friday morning on a charge of assaulting his wife. The latter was present, with both her eyes in deep mourning, evidence of the treatment she had received at the hands of her husband. The woman's little boy told the magistrate that the accused had assaulted his mother.

"He gave her a couple of black eyes," was the way the youngster put it to the court.

Magistrate Farrell told Willis that he had been before court before on a similar charge, and that this was his last chance.

"If you come up again on such a charge, you will go over the road," remarked the magistrate, as he dismissed the charge.
