A Guest Dinner From Let-Overs.

A reader of this column has sent me, for publication, the following interesting account of turning food left-overs into a guest meal, in an emergency.

"At about a quarter after four o'clock, one afternoon, I received a telephone call from a friend of my husband's, saying that he was in town for the day and would like to see us. On impulse without thinking what provisions I had on hand—I invited him to dinner at 6:30. When I hung up the receiver I realized that I had in the ice box only some meat-scrapings from a leg of lamb, a little brown gravy, a dish of string beans, a bunch of beets, a pint of blueberries—and that was all!

I flew to my daughter, Peggy and told her that we were to have a guest. Knowing the spite of the harder, she was aghast. Then mother and daughter started for the kitchen.

"The first thing to do was to see just how much left over meat we had. There proved to be quite a little after it was cut off the bone—and it was tender, delicious Spring Lamb. It would do, warmed up in a well-seasoned brown sauce founded on the gravy. There were plenty of new potatoes in the pantry and enough time left to cook them in. Then we decided to make a vegetable salad of the beets and beans, topped with some homemade mayonnaise and made attractive by lettuce.

"Mother breathed more freely now, but there was still another anxiety; the desert. The pint of berries was certainly a small allowance for five people (we had four in our family). Then we discovered a few pieces of plain home-made cake in the cake box, and had an idea; we would arrange the cake in the bottom of our cut-glass dessert bowl, sprinkle the berries over the cake, pour on top a boiled custard (which, fortunately, there was plenty of time to make) and top all with egg-whites beaten stiff with a little sugar. This was a dessert dainty enough to please the most fastidious diner:

"Mother set the table and congratulated herself that Peggy had bought a few pink roses the day before from a flower vender and they made a lovely centerpiece for the dinner table. She was also glad to find that she had on hand a few pieces of preserved ginger which, in a pretty dish, not only garnished the table but would serve as an appetizer between the courses.

"At a quarter after six mother and daughter, in fresh summer dresses, awaited serenely the arrival of their guest, comfortably conscious that the dinner with its savory meat, new potatoes, delicious salad garnished with a handful of pistachio nuts, tempting dessert, with crisp little cookies (made hastily by Peggy) and fragrant coffee, was ample in quantity and needed no apologies."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

THURSDAY, SEPT. 21.
Adverse astral forces seem to control this day, basing the conclusion on the predominant power of the major planets, supported in their portentous passage by the weakness of the propitious figures. The day may be saved by the conjunction of the luminaries, which is read as a fortunate aspect, assisting to success and prosperity, with advancement and recognition, especially through the offices of those in authority or power. Guard against litigation and accident, and give especial attention to the health.

Those whose birthday it is may expect and seek the friendship or assistance of those in high places. They should take good care of the health and avoid all danger and accident or litigation. A child born on this day should be given early training in self-control and self-reliance and be fitted to cope with difficulties and tests of patience.

Decision Reserved.
Second Storma, a resident of Verona, was tried before Magistrates Alkinson and Cameron in the county magistrates' court, Brock street, Wednesday morning on a charge of being drunk prepared by the license inspector. A number of witnesses were heard, including the accused, and the magistrates reserved their decision. C. R. Webster prosecuted and A. B. Cunningham defended.

Miss Maudgetta Koen, Sydenham, left on Sept. 19th for Peterborough to attend the normal school.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Kirkman in care of the "Efficient Housekeeping" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

GIRLS! BLEACH SKIN WHITE WITH LEMON

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, and then shortly note the beauty and whiteness of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use this lemon lotion to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, also as a freckle, sunburn, and tan bleacher because it doesn't irritate.

THE RAIN INTERFERED WITH THE FAIR EVENTS

Newman's Electrical Booth. Those who have visited Kingston Industrial Exhibition before know that they will find something worth looking at when they come to the booth of the Newman Electric Company. For those who are making their first visit a word to the wise is sufficient—do not miss the Newman Booth. Mr. Brock, who is in charge of this exhibit, always manages to have something different in the line of attractions each year and this year's display surpasses anything shown before. The booth is just inside the Exhibition Building door that faces the race track. Be sure to see it.

Allan Lumber Company. In the matter of fine lumber, building supplies and interior finishing woods, there will be much food for thought supplied by the booth of the Allan Lumber Company. This booth is found on the left side as you enter the building from the main gates, just a few feet from the center.

tre space. It has been all finished in woods, papers and finishes carried by the Allan Company and has on display several lines of finishing materials for which this firm has special ones. Ask the demonstrator to show you the new flooring and the latest in serviceable and economic roofing materials.

Whether you are an extensive owner of houses, or a tenant, or a plain householder, or just an intending householder, it will pay to examine the Allan Lumber Company's exhibit with great care. Ladies, especially, will be interested in this exhibit which will show them many ways in which they may keep their homes clean, sanitary and attractive.

Fair Notes. Howard Cassel and Loyal Lakins, of Westbrooke, are visitors at the fair.

Fred J. Travers, Toronto, is a visitor in Kingston during Fair week and is leaving for Alexandria, Va., the latter part of this week.

Police Constable Beupre was among those having his "map mapped" in silhouette at the fair grounds during Tuesday afternoon. It is reported that the officer has a very fine profile.

The main exhibition building was fairly well filled all during the afternoon yesterday. The kids were there in crowds. More rain could not keep them away.

Don't forget to buy your copy of the Whig at the Branch Office in the Crystal Building.

There is music in the air at the exhibition nowadays. An orchestra is on hand today and the different musical instrument displays keep the air a-humming in reality all day long.

Go, but the kids do come after those Whig scribbles like wolves; talk about giving money away; it isn't nearly so fast a proposition as handling the crowd when those scribbles appear.

MOTHER ASKS THE COURT TO LOOK AFTER CHILDREN

"You Have Sent the Bread Winner to Jail," She Shouts.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—A frail-looking little woman with a little baby in her arms, one tot trotting at her side, and a third tugging at her skirt came into the police court this morning, went right up to the bench, and planted the three kiddies before Judge Monet.

"Here are the children. I don't want them," she shouted in semi-hysterical fashion. "Send me to jail if you like. You have sent the bread-winner to prison—now look after the children." And with that she fled from the court.

The judge, gaping with astonishment, placed the children in the care of Salvation Army officers. He found that the husband is under a six-months' sentence in Bordeaux jail for keeping a still, and that the woman, faced with starvation and lack of aid, had risen from her bed, where the youngest baby was born four days ago and decided upon this dramatic appeal to justice.

The minister of justice will be asked to pardon the father, so that he can look after the family.
