

21,000 WERE AT THE FAIR

Thursday's Attendance Broke the Record—There Were Thrills Galore.

Another day of ideal weather with plenty of good warm sunshine, was handed out by the weatherman on Thursday, "Farmers' Day" at the Kingston Industrial Exhibition. The attendance continued to soar over all previous records, reaching the high water mark of 21,000 for the day. It was a day of vast enjoyment for thousands of visitors from all over Eastern Canada and the Northern United States.

Several new features appeared on the programme for the day, notably the aeroplane flight and parachute drop. The aviators had been unable to appear the first two days of the fair, owing to mishaps along the route from Montreal to Kingston. They arrived in the city on Thursday morning and the flight was pulled off in the afternoon at schedule time. The plane took to the air about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and after circling over the grounds for some time, Prof. Farley jumped from the plane in his parachute at a height of 3,000 feet. The daring feat attracted a great deal of attention and the course of the birdman's drop was followed with breathless interest.

Thrills Galore.

As might be naturally expected, the big Midway, featuring the World of Mirrors, drew like a magnet, morning, afternoon and evening. Here is where the crowd congregates, and here is where they have a royal chance to get rid of their loose change for value received. The excited individual with the strong lungs and the appealing gestures reigns supreme, and the world and the fulness thereof are his. Down around the corner where the crowds go you will find him, cool and perspiring, but always happy, a human magnet in a sea of humanity.

Well worth while is a visit to the Exhibition Midway, for whatever be sought, here will it be found, from thrills that leave a cold shiver above the heat of the autumn days, to chuckles that persist long after the gorgeous visions have faded into the backwash of memory. Here are blaring bands, costumed peoples from every clime beneath the sun, pygmies, giants, freaks and every manner of strange animal that the imagination of man could devise. Here, too, are things beautiful and bizarre, appealing and weird, and, summing up all, the irresistible appeal to man's fatal weakness—curiosity.

The R.C.H.A. detachment, Riding Establishment, Royal Military College entertained the grandstand patrons with a musical ride for their first appearance since their return from the Toronto Exhibition. The movements were carried out with clock-like precision and round after round of applause greeted the various sections of the drill as executed. Men and horses worked together as one and the success of the ride was only made possible by their keen training. The trained Belgian animals again received a generous amount of applause, which was richly deserved.

Miss Nichols delighted her audience with her clever horsemanship in the jumping and dancing feats, and many patrons of the fair have remarked that this exhibition is one of the best acts on the entire fair menu. In the evening the majority of the programme was repeated for the benefit of the late-comers. The community singing was enjoyed again, and the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs deserve considerable praise for conducting this attractive feature.

Exhibition Notes.
Another big day today. If "Bob" doesn't look out he'll have the Canadian National Exhibition looking to its attendance laurels.

"Not a sale, folks, just to advertise—yes, Mr. McGee, it's genuine—not made of paper—come and get yours everybody."

The fire department is coming in for great favor with many of the visitors who have been shown, by means of the model next to the exhibition office, just what happens when a city alarm bell rings.

One of the Midway men had to close up shop last night. The boy became skilled at playing his game, with a little practice, and his business was about to be swamped when he decided that he'd better pull down his curtains.

The directors of the Kingston Industrial exhibition are very well satisfied with the showing so far and are optimistic at all times. "After keeping out of jail by a shade four years ago we are a hard bunch to worry," said one of them.

"Here, friend, I've got a souvenir for you," says the lady.
"No, thank you, sister, I have six at home who need the money," says the man.

Judging by the exhibits at this year's exhibition it would be no difficult matter to stage a separate Motor Show next year if some sort of building could be erected for the purpose.

It might also be a good idea to divide off the main building wings into "Pure Food Wing," "House Furnishings Wing," etc.

The first day was a sort of damp-er, but, my, what a comeback.

One more day and then "Everybody get ready for Kingston Industrial Exhibition of 1922. Bigger and better than ever."

VETCRAFT EXHIBITS

Many visitors to the Kingston Industrial Exhibition have passed favorable comment on the exhibit of the Vetcraft Shops of the Vocational branch of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. The exhibit in its entirety is very interesting and attractive and is a credit to the department. The beautiful shades for lamps in all parts of the house are the main attraction, and are arranged in a large booth a few feet inside the main entrance to the large exhibition building. Many new designs have been perfected and approved during the past month and are being shown at this booth during Fair week. The new bedroom shades, quaint little things which please all, and the handkerchief boxes, both new departures for the local Vetcraft shops, come in for special notice by visitors and deserve all the compliments showered upon them.

In another booth in the southwest wing of the building the many different kinds of wooden toys and novelties made in the Vetcraft shops are being shown, along with games also made by these shops. By the courtesy of Captain Smith, head of the local branch of the D.S.C.R. and Hugh Ryan, who is in charge of the Vetcraft Shops, patients of the hospitals under the jurisdiction of the department have been allowed to display their bead work and other handicraft, and the famous "Bull Dog" clothes grip in this second booth.

Both displays are very tastefully gotten up and those in charge, as well as the returned soldiers whose skill and ability is responsible for the turnout of these products, are to be congratulated on them.

JUDGE H. S. MOTT.

A Great Rotarian and a Great Lover of Boys.

"Rotary Voice," the weekly organ of the Rotary Club of Toronto, published on Sept. 12th the following sketch of Judge H. S. Mott, the newly appointed chairman of the boys' work committee. Judge Mott is a Leeds county boy and has many warm friends in this city, who will be interested in the brief sketch of his career which follows:

Hawley Mott, this year's chairman of the Boys' Work committee, possesses natural aptitude for the duties of that position, and has developed some practical plans for an extension of Rotary's activities in this direction, the details of which will, no doubt, be submitted in due course. In the meantime, members will be interested in some intimate facts about the official head of our biggest piece of Rotary service.

Hawley was born in the vicinity of Brockville, Ontario, the hamlet of Lyn, priding itself on having been his birthplace, while Hawley himself is equally proud of the fact that he is a son of parents both of whom were of U. E. Loyalist stock. After the usual public school training he attended high school in the classic village of Athens, many other successful Canadians having been given their start towards their goal in that same well-conducted institution. Leaving high school, Hawley started teaching in Delta, going back to school himself later and attaining his first-class certificate. Coming to Hamilton he took up university work and attended the school of pedagogy, fitting himself for his very successful teaching career. He assumed the principalship of the public school at Westport and then started his upward climb by taking charge of the departments of mathematics and science in the Newburgh high school.

Hawley's next move was to Toronto, his first post here being that of assistant master of Ryerson school. He afterwards became principal of McCaul and later took charge of the twenty-seven-room school on Fern avenue. His success in handling growing boys and girls and his sympathetic appreciation of their problems led to his appointment by the civic authorities to the position of judge of the juvenile court, in succession to Judge Boyd.

In this work Hawley has achieved wonderful success, the juvenile court of Toronto having attained a continental reputation for its intelligent handling of the thousands of boy and girl problems presented for solution every year. The theory on which Hawley conducts his court is that in every normal boy and girl there is a disposition to do the right thing rather than the vicious, and when delinquencies are discovered the cause of the lapse from the normal is sought. A doctor determines whether the disease is in the child and a social worker investigates the home conditions to ascertain whether the environment there is to blame. In a surprisingly large number of cases the indifference of the parents is found to be responsible for the child's appearance in court and, of course, in all such cases, an attempt is made to bring to these parents a sense of their responsibility and their privilege. It may not be generally known that the court over which Hawley presides has all the powers given the other courts, and that though it is commonly called a juvenile court, it administers certain Acts, among them the Adoption Act and that dealing with the children of unmarried parents. Over one hundred cases under the latter have been handled during the last year. The father who deserts his wife and children, too, frequently finds himself called upon by Hawley to account for his action, and to accept the decision rendered by his court as to the provision he must make for the care of his family. More than $1,000 a month is collected by this court and administered for dependents of deserting fathers.

Hawley's experience fits him in a peculiarly appropriate way to head the Toronto Rotary Club's activities in boys' work. He holds to the belief that the under-privileged boy should not be the subject of charity, but that what he needs is a chance to overcome by his own efforts the disability from which he suffers. This, he holds, is quite in accord with Rotary principles.

Hawley became a Rotarian in 1920, shortly after he was appointed to the bench, and during the interval has become well known to Rotary clubs in many Ontario cities in which he has spoken on the work of Toronto's juvenile court. As a result of his addresses, similar courts have been established in several other cities. He is a Methodist, and was for many years superintendent of the Sunday school at Euclid avenue church. Later, when he moved to his present home on High Park avenue, he was persuaded to take a similar position in the High Park Methodist church. He is a mason, and has welcomed the many opportunities which have been afforded him during the last two years of telling his brother-Masons in many lodges something about the work of the juvenile court in its efforts to prevent crime rather than to correct it. He is also a member of the Board of Trade. His favorite pastime is fishing, and during the month each summer that he spends at his cottage in the Rideau lakes, finds ample scope for his skill in landing the elusive bass. Hawley is married, of course, and has a charming daughter and a typical son.

Little Pat's Answer.

Little Pat started at school yesterday, entering the first grade. After he had come home his mother listened to many strange tales of the day's doings. But Pat's reports were not confined to his domain alone, for in the early part of the evening he was walking along the street near his home, when a grownup friend stopped him.

Right away things started. No questions were needed. Pat was wound up like an eight-day clock.

"Say, I went to school today and got whilkinks, what a time we had. De teacher giv us a piece of paper dat was about a yard long and about a foot wide and she made us put numbers all over de place."

"What, a yard long and a foot wide?" asked Pat's friend.

"Yes," was the reply, and then the youngster measured off a distance of about 10 inches long and about three inches wide. That was Pat's idea of a yard and a foot.

"De teacher axed me if I cud count and I told her yes and I can add, too."

"What is one and one, Pat?"

"Two, and two and two is four and three and three is six," kept on Pat without a letup. He continued this until he reached seven and seven. He could not answer this.

The little fellow's friend then tried him on a lower number.

"What is two and one, Pat?"

"Shoe polish."

"What is two an' one?"

"Shoe polish, I said."

"No, two and one makes three."

"Ya can't tell me, mister, cus I knows two an' one is shoe polish."

Nothing could make Pat believe that two an' one was anything else.

Did You Ever Stop to Think.

That the advertising columns of your newspapers show you where, how and when to save money.

That the farmer's wife is the one that makes farming a success. She is the essential part to the smooth running of the farm, a true partner in every sense of the word. Without her, a lot of the work would not be done. Her day is long and taken up with work. She gets but little leisure time, but the friends of her leisure hours are the papers she takes. They not only furnish her the news of the world, but the advertising columns is her market place. She finds there what, where and when to buy the goods she needs.

That as long as a mail order house a thousand miles away can come into a community and beat the local merchants at their own game, in spite of the handicap of package, freight or postage and a big expense for catalogues and advertising, it behooves the local merchant to get busy and stay busy.

That the method by which the home town merchant can meet mail-order competition, is by building up their efficiency and by advertising prices, quality and quick turnover of stocks.

RECALLED TO OTTAWA.

Premier King was among his constituents at Stouffville, Ontario, when on Saturday he was recalled to Ottawa to deal with the war crisis. The right hand picture shows him presenting the Mackenzie King trophy to the Stouffville bowlers, who headed the county league.
