Dutiful wife: The term commonly used to describe a feminine valet.

General depression usually is outflanked by the strategy of old Colonial Shortage.

The grave is not the end, unless you are speaking of political leadership in Ireland.

It isn't a mere accident that pessimism comes after liver complaint in the dictionary.

The best cure for sensitive feelings is a little less petting and a little more spanking.

Still, if there were no henpecked husbands, who would consume the sardine catch each year?

The chief trouble with Greece appears to be too much ambition and not enough Venizelos.

Conan Doyle is not the first man who got on the front page and thought he was in heaven.

Inability to cuss cramps a woman's style badly when a guest leaves wet soap on a window sill.

As a rule, a man's insignificance is in exact proportion to the importance of his telephone voice.

The individual who lacks the sense to make him careful is hardly ever very serious over consequences.

The railway timetable may now be placed with those other documents commonly described as "interesting, if true."

Homicide seems terrible until you think of the driver who whizzes past and then slows down to let you eat his dust.

It is nice of that visiting economist to give our industry the once-over. But was it really needs the turn-over.

Speaking of centenarians, some writer says wit is essential to longevity. He is speaking of persons, however, not jokes.

Correct this sentence: "I am so glad," the wife said, "that you have feminine friends who are able to appreciate you as I do."

Perhaps a union isn't responsible for what its radical members do, but it is responsible for what it doesn't do to the radicals.

If a man could capture one of those hot stars described by scientists he could light the house and heat the furnace at the same time.

Nations once fought to protect the national honor, but the record of the last few years reveals that as a mighty small thing to fight about.

The world advances along some lines, but it has never improved on the original lie: "I don't care about the money; it's the principle of the thing."

If you are really weary of this vain world, just walk down a quiet street in some of our large cities carrying something that resembles a pay envelope.

THE PEOPLE'S PARKS.

A citizen some time ago was heard to remark that in his youthful days the providing of such facilities for the health and recreation of the people as are now so generally available would have been futile, since a large portion of the public would have been unable to take advantage of them.

The shortening of working hours due largely to the introduction of machinery and labor saving devices, the frequent holidays, including Saturday afternoons in the summer and all the year around for some trades and businesses, and the increasing vogue of the vacation habit, have brought opportunities for the enjoyment of the parks unknown to an earlier generation.

It was accepted that parks were only for large cities; or at least they were not needed by small towns. To-day communities of 5,000 population are expanding as much money proportionately on their public pleasure grounds as the big cities.

Furthermore, they are introducing the same "features," band concerts, community singing, and even pageants and dramatic performances, that have proved so popular in places of metropolitan proportions.

"Keep off the grass" signs and more inducements to the people to find health and pleasure in the great outdoors mark the modern city park. Due perhaps to the automobile, an increasing patronage of the parks is noted, particularly in the matter of family parties. This was especially observable during fair week in this city, when the parks were crowded daily with out-of-town automobile parties, who repaired there for luncheon and rest.

Every year witnesses the parks occupying a more prominent place in the life of the community. And their possibilities have not yet been fully shown.

YOUTH AND ITS DAY.

A roster of champions in various sports this year carried the names of more than a score of boys and girls whose ages range from sixteen to twenty-two years. They were successful over veterans, the average of whose years was very much higher.

On the stage and in the movies youth of both sexes also predominate. Youth is certainly having its day, but in the more essential activities of life men and women of mature years continue to hold their prominence.

A healthy mind in a healthy body is the greatest blessing of life. Rational sports temperately purged are a means for keeping the physical body fit, and contribute to longevity. Long life brings experience, and experience is a chief ingredient of wisdom.

If it were possible to bring some of the spirit and love of sports into the field of essential work, much friction and unhappiness would be removed from the world to-day. Human nature is so varied in its predilections that there is never any danger of a bitter struggle for the soft places in life.

Just as there are extremes in sport between the pugilist and the polo-player, the billiardist and the foot-baller, so there are extremes in the field of labor, but the distance between sports and labor is measured by the poles, when the mental attitude is viewed. One reason for the difference is that in sports each contestant strives by fair play to excel, while in the field of labor—well, too often fair rivalry is absent.

Another and possibly the greatest difference is that in sports the contestant selects his field and, if he is ambitious, trains for championship therein; while in essential work it is often a haphazard matter of selection and indifference to results.

ANGLO-SAXON RESPONSIBILITY.

The nature of the civilization we know depends so largely upon Anglo-Saxon co-operation and good will that it is of extreme importance that the British debt to the United States be so dealt with as not to leave a sense of injustice either in America or in England, declares R. C. Leffingwell, late assistant secretary of the United States Treasury, writing in the October Yale Review. It can be so dealt with if the facts are ascertained, analyzed, and disclosed to the people of both countries.

The problem cannot be disposed of by the man in the street, or by the politicians. It will remain unsettled and a running sore between the two great English-speaking peoples for generations to come unless it is subjected to the same patient, co-operative, considerate analysis and discussion to which the inter-allied financial problems were subjected by the British and American Treasuries during the war.

ALONG LIFE'S DETOUR BY SAM HILL

We Hate a Tightwad. The guy who burns up money is an awful fool, we will admit; But still we like him better than The bird who freezes onto it.

Observations of Oldest Inhabitant. The man who never could go to church on Sunday because he couldn't get up in time now is up at daybreak on the Sabbath to get the old bus in shape for the day's joy ride.

Pa, You Make Us Blush. "Pa, what do they mean by invisible means of support?" asked Clarence. "I dunno. Guess it refers to the kind of garters the girls are using to hold up their roll-down hose," replied his dad.

That Isn't the Only Town To Lose Its Beers. Mrs. Kate Beers has closed her hotel here and will move to Belvidere.

Safe Bet. Now if a married man Should shyly kiss a miss, His wife would howl, no doubt Because he'd kissed amiss.

A Reel Wonder. "It tells here of a typewriter that can write music," remarked Mrs. Grouch. "That's nothing," growled her husband. "I've got one at the office who can chew gum, powder her nose, and talk a blue streak."

Fool Questions. G. B. asks: "Does bawling out a player make a better ballplayer out of him?" Will John J. McGraw please write?

"Twist You and Me." First you save some money, Then you buy a car, You take a moonshine joy-ride— Undertaker, there you are. —O. F. C.

All Questions End That Way. (Trenton (Mo.) Times) Clovis W. Wyr, who has been having a rollicking vacation, returned to the city and is again to be found at the Gipson Furniture Store, where he looks after the undertaking.

Let's Go. He: "What's that little thing beside the clock? It looks like a traffic signal." She: "It is, and when dad sets it 'GO' I wouldn't advise you to stop to argue with the traffic cop."

Cruelties. The tender-hearted Dolly Dream Said, "Have a heart, I beg; Oh mother, do not whip that cream, And please don't beat that egg. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

The gentle little Maggie Cried, "I shall have a shock If you perform that cruel deed, And go and scold that croak." —St. Wayne Press.

Oh, mother, dear, withhold your hand." Cried gentle Sarah Glugg; "The sight is more than I can stand, Pray do not beat that rug!" —Akron Times

"Come down from off that turning bar," Called little Johnnie Spratt;

Our Canadian Question And Answer Corner

Q.—What is the extent of tourist traffic in Canada? A.—The value of tourist traffic in Canada was estimated to be $75,000,000 in 1920, and it has greatly increased since then. The Customs reported nearly 100,000 motor cars entering Canada in 1920, and this number has also largely increased.

Q.—Why is a Nova Scotian called a Bluenose? A.—A Nova Scotian is called a Bluenose, it is said, after a potato, as stated by Judge Haliburton in his Sam Slick books. Another and less likely reason is that bluenose of nose arose from the winter cold.
