IN "The Dictator"
COMING:
"The Call of Home"
STRAND
since the remarkable recovery of Canadian exchange.

Laugh With Reid.
Ask any of the patrons of the Strand Theatre who saw Wallace Reid in "The Dictator" last night what a scream it is and you will be at the theatre early tonight. The bill is a comedy affair from beginning to end with the exception of the Pathé News. Wally is at his finest and assisted by Walter Long, Theodore Kosloff and Lilla Lee, he makes the picture a knockout. Remember on Thursday "The Leather Pushers" commence. This is a short reel feature of the ring that has been thoroughly enjoyed in thousands of theatres. It will tingle your sporting blood.
All Have not Settled.
Although the dispute between the Grand Opera House and the striking musicians has been settled, the managements of the Strand and Allen theatres and the musicians' executive have not yet been able to come to terms. According to a union executive officer the managements will have to accede to union demands within two weeks or the motion picture operators will be called out on sympathetic strike. He stated that all the theatres had been given two weeks to make a decision and as the time was up on Saturday night, no further offers could be made. According to the decision of the union executive non-union players may not be used during the next two weeks without a sympathetic strike.
It was announced on Tuesday that $330.31 was collected during the General Hospital tag day on Saturday.

AMUSEMENTS
What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

Listen To Me.
Speaking of "Listen to Me," the big musical show which comes to the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, Oct. 4th, with matinee and night performance, the London Advertiser says in part:
"Listen to Me," the musical comedy presented at the Grand Theatre Friday night, carried with it an atmosphere of prettiness, daintiness, cleverness and utterly charming vivaciousness. There rippled through a vein of spontaneous gaiety which thrilled the audience into happy smiles, and it must have been that the house, so important a factor in the success of the play, sensed something good coming, for it was filled to capacity. An airy whisp of plot floating around an exceedingly handsome man in search of his affinity was able to give a very good account of itself, and brought about in logical sequence, scenes which had all the fantastic beauty usually associated with most romantic fairy tales.
"As for the chorus, one could go farther and find none better. They were all pretty, all lithe and graceful, and wore the most charming of costumes, with one especially striking outfit, made entirely of crepe paper. The lighting effect showed the skill of an artist and added extensively to the beauty of the entire presentation. There was considerable cleverness shown in one scene, which showed the North Pole with the lights of the Aurora Borealis in the background."
At the Grand.
The Rex Stock Company, the company that so excels in comedy, have for their next presentation, one of the brightest and snappiest comedies that have delighted the London stage in years, a comedy in which that star of comedians, Miss Marie Tempest, starred—"Kitty Be Careful," with Zana Vaughn in Miss Tempest's part, and Rex as the lovable Sir Reginald Belzoni. Bart. "Kitty Be Careful" is one of those happy comedies whose nearest approach to the bed-room farce is the fact that there is a bed-room in the office somewhere. Like all English comedies it is played quietly and sincerely, which of course accentuates the comedy of the lines and situations. Appearing in conjunction with the comedy will appear Rex & Co's. latest importation, Howard and Hazel Brown, a vaudeville team that have just finished a tour of the Pantheatre Circuit. Mr. and Mrs. Brown come from Spokane, Washington, to Kingston, to join the company. The usual high standard of scenic and electric effects will accompany "Kitty Be Careful."

Post Plays "The Masquerader."
The present appearance of Guy Bates Post in the motion picture version of "The Masquerader," produced by Richard Walton Tully and now being shown at the Allen theatre, leads logically to an interesting emendation of the various casts that have been seen in this play on the stage. It will be remembered that the stage production has been running continuously for over six solid years all over the United States and Canada as well as a tour in Australia. Outside of Post, who has played the dual role of Chilcote and Loder in every performance since the opening night, the members of the supporting cast have, naturally, changed from time to time. The role of Brock, portrayed by Edward M. Kimball, was created on the stage by Louis Calvert and later by Lionel Belmont, now a film favorite. Just before the commencement of filming on this picture this particular part was in the hands of Eiwyn Eaton. Eve, the wife, played by Ruth Sinclair in the picture, was originally created by Thais Lawton, subsequently played by Mrs. Guy Bates Post, whose stage name was Adole Emmet.

Support of Greek Army.
As for British statesmanship and diplomacy, one can only raise one's hands in despair. Against constant temptations of the gravest kind from men who knew the weakness of the Greek character, the growing strength and fanaticism of the Mohammedan world government, largely influenced by Churchill, the biggest gambler in world politics today, they gave their full weight of influence to the Greek claims, incited the Greek army to take risks which were deadly danger as we know now in the result.
Ever since the armistice with Germany in 1918 this man Churchill, whose undoubted brilliance and audacity put a spell on Lloyd George and his colleagues, has played with high stakes for the eastern empire. Ignoring all cautious advice, condescending to his country's burden of debts and taxation, he adventured wildly into Mesopotamia and Palestine, challenged French interests in Syria, stirred up unrest in the Mohammedan world, used Greece as a trump card against the Turks. His responsibility is enormous; he ought not to escape the frightful consequences.

OBITUARY
The Late Mrs. Redden, Newburgh.
On Sept. 3rd, there passed away another resident of Newburgh, in the person of Mrs. Redden. Mrs. Redden had been confined to her room for some time, from an affection of the throat. She leaves one son, Mrs. Newburgh, and one daughter, Mrs. Frank Peters, also of Newburgh. She has resided with her son for a number of years, her husband having died a number of years ago. She had been a great sufferer for a number of weeks. She had many friends and neighbors who rendered much christian service toward her during the closing weeks of her life, and to whom she spoke of her faith in God. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Nickle, and was under the direction of Undertaker Paul. The remains were laid to rest in Wilton cemetery.

The bullet which lodged in Thomas Smylie's jaw when he shot himself through the ear last week was removed on Monday afternoon at the General Hospital. Smylie is under heavy guard in the ward until he can be removed to jail.

FRANCE STAINS HONOR BY HELPING THE TURKS

Advocacy of Moslems 'Claims Disloyal to the Prestige of Christendom.

By Sir Philip Gibbs.
London, Oct. 2.—Whatever may be the final settlement terms with Turkey the story of this near eastern crisis will remain as the most painful and humiliating memory to the British empire and as a danger signal to Europe. Neither France nor Great Britain will emerge from this crisis with unscathed reputation. France, by right of tradition, protector of the Christian minorities in the east, has sullied that honor by her enthusiastic advocacy of Turkish claims by arming the Turks with French rifles and ammunition, while watching the horror of the Smyrna massacre.
Although the French government accepted the original treaty with Turkey made at the Peace of Sevres, they broke away from their allies by a separate compact with Kemal which smashed that treaty to bits.

No Sense of Loyalty.
Recently when Turkish victories and menaces demanded the closest co-operation between France and Great Britain, they acted again with utter disregard of British prestige, with no sense of loyalty by withdrawing their troops from Chanak in the neutral zone on the Asiatic shore of the Dardanelles at the very time when English soldiers were ordered to hold that line at all costs.
I have no quarrel with their desire to avoid a new war in the near east. That avoidance is utterly essential to a world still exhausted and poverty stricken after the great European war.

But it is difficult to acquit the French government of having incited the Turk aggression, aided it with a supply of arms and departed from neutrality in a way that is hostile to British interests, disloyal to the safety and prestige of Christendom. I hate to write so harshly, but I do so with honest conviction.

University Notes.
The fresher attendance of Queen's is larger than last year and constitutes a record. There are over a hundred new girls at the college while last year there were about ninety. The freshman year in arts is still growing and may over take last year's attendance.
The committees of the Q.W.C.A. and Q.M.C.A. are meeting to arrange for the students' reception.
The freshmen's outfits are the most original seen in some years and the sophomores who designed them are to be congratulated on their artistry.
Principal R. Bruce Taylor is to deliver his annual address to the students on Wednesday evening. Dr. Taylor is preaching at Cornell on Sunday.

McKelvey in Hospital With a Sore Knee
Jack McKelvey one of the star men on Queens rugby team, is taking treatment at the general hospital for an infected knee. A few days ago after playing tennis he fell on a cinder path and on Monday there were symptoms of blood poisoning. He went over to the hospital and poultices are being applied at frequent intervals. He will be out of the game on Saturday but it is expected that he will be in good shape for the game in Montreal on October 14th.
The opening address to the Faculty of Medicine at Queen's University will be given at 4 p.m., Wednesday, by Dr. Reginald Morton, London, Eng., whose subject will be "Recent Advances in X-Ray Therapy." The lecture will be given in Convocation Hall and will be open to the public.

Army and Navy Row RECEIVES VENTILATION
Two Members Make Charge—Would Like to Remove the Commandant.
A row, which must be very irritating to the commandant, "Rev. Dr." J. Gwalla Evans, came to a head in the course of the regular meeting of the local unit of the Army and Navy Veterans Association on Monday evening. Frank Smith, an ex-member of the 1st Canadian Division, who as chairman of the billiard room committee, is a member of the executive, made a charge, in open meeting, against F. E. Ling, the financial secretary, who is, naturally, very much in the confidence of Evans. Among those who supported Smith was a veteran named Saunders who, it is reported, expressed himself very plainly, and contends that not only Ling should be removed from his position, but that it would be greatly in the interests of the organization if there could be a change of commandant.
As one veteran has said to the Whig: "The police magistrate was told last Friday morning that Evans has said that he is tired of Kingston. But it was not mentioned that citizens generally were tired of Evans."
On Monday evening, when Smith laid his charge against Ling in open meeting, Evans made a plea in defence of his secretary, and stressed the value of harmony in the organization. But Smith and Saunders were not to be reconciled, and Evans finally explained that such a charge should be heard before a committee of the members. Evans, it is reported, pleaded for time, but Smith insisted that if his charge could not be heard in open meeting, the committee be selected at once and the matter proceeded with. The selection was made, and witnesses heard, and the verdict announced at about 11 o'clock.
It appears that the quarrel originated about six weeks ago, and that the details of it were threshed out by "those appointed to sit in judgment." It was noticed that Commandant Evans remained with the committee, and the verdict was the natural one when Evans considered it necessary for Ling to be protected. Hence it was declared that Smith was also guilty. Smith said last night that he was not by any means finished, and Saunders is also reported to be of no uncertain mind that there should be a clean-up in the organization.

The wills of the following deceased persons have been probated at the Court House: William Patterson, Margaret King, Clara Switzer West, Elias Quick.

Stanley Graham presented a report of the activities during the past year, and Gordon Smith, in charge of the reunion committee, suggested a programme for the first week-end in November. On Friday afternoon it is proposed to have an impressive ceremony at the stadium when the tablet, presented by the Athletic board of control, will be unveiled. In the evening a reception will be held at the university at which the Year '13 graduates will be guests of honor.
On Saturday afternoon the alumni will probably attend the intercollegiate football game and in the evening the annual dinner of the Queen's Alumni association will be held. On Monday afternoon the alumni will see Queen's play Argonauts. The programme is, of course, subject to revision and definite announcements will be sent to the graduates very shortly. At Monday's meeting it was proposed that a monthly or quarterly publication should be issued dealing with alumni activities and the matter will receive consideration later.

THE QUEEN'S ALUMNI ASSOCIATION MEETS

Bronze Tablet to be Unveiled at the George Richardson Stadium.

At an enthusiastic meeting of the local Queen's Alumni association in the Arts Club room on Monday evening it was announced that during the reunion of Year '13 a handsome bronze tablet would be unveiled at the George Richardson stadium to commemorate the gift of the edifice by James Richardson. The gathering which took the form of a smoker, was addressed by a number of graduates including Judge Lavelle and Dr. Edward Ryan who pointed out the valuable efforts that might be made by the association to act as a binding tie between the university and the graduates.
