

A BALKAN WAR WAS PREVENTED

By British Refusal to Allow the Turks to Occupy Thrace.

London, Oct. 9.—(Rt. Hon. Andrew Bonar Law, in a letter to the Times, on the Near East situation, says: "I have followed with the greatest anxiety the recent events in the Near East, and the position this moment seems to me very alarming. It would serve no useful purpose to criticize, even to consider, the circumstances leading up to the present situation. What alone is important is to find the right course of action to be taken now."

"When the Greek forces were annihilated in Asia Minor and driven into the sea from Smyrna, it seems to me certain that unless a decisive warning had at once been issued, the victorious Turkish forces would have attempted to enter Constantinople and cross into Thrace. If they had been allowed to do so, what would have been the result? Our withdrawal in such circumstances would have been regarded throughout the whole Muslim world as a defeat for the British Empire. Although it may be true that the supposed pro-Greek sympathies of the British Government would have alienated Muslim feeling in India, the danger of trouble in India from that cause would have been nothing in comparison with the danger which would have arisen in consequence of what would have been regarded as British impotence in the face of the victorious Turkish army."

"Further, such advance of the Turkish forces would probably have meant a repetition in Constantinople of the recent events in Smyrna, and would certainly have involved Thrace in horrors similar to those of Anatolia, and the probability—indeed, I think, certainly—of a renewal of war throughout the Balkans. Therefore it is undoubtedly right that the British Government should endeavor to prevent such misfortunes. It is not right, however, that the burden of taking necessary action should fall on the British Empire alone. In the agreement arranged with the Allies in Paris by Lord Curzon proposals were made to the Turks which certainly were fair to them. Beyond these terms, in my opinion, the Allies ought not to go."

LEMON "BOOTLEGGERS" ARE NOW ON THE JOB

Tippler Tells Magistrate How He Got Bottle of the Extract.

Lemon "bootleggers" are now on the job in Kingston.

It was interesting to hear a tippler in the police court on Monday morning tell how he had managed to get "something" to quench his thirst. The said "something" happened to be a bottle of lemon extract.

"I got it from a man in a hotel yard," said the thirsty one. "It was Saturday night. I had to go to this yard on an errand. As I was going into the yard I met a man who asked me if I wanted to buy a bottle of lemon extract. I said 'No,' but he remarked that the weather was pretty cold and that it would warm me up. Very foolishly I bought the bottle. I paid thirty-five cents for it. The magistrate imposed a fine of $10 and costs with the option of one month in jail."

Oshawa Anxious to Hear Why Coal is High There

Oshawa, Oct. 7.—W. J. Trick, chairman of the fuel committee, announced Saturday that the committee had decided to request J. A. Ellis, fuel controller, to come to Oshawa and fix the price of coal. Discussing the decision of the committee, W. J. Trick said that members of the committee could not understand why coal was being retailed in Oshawa at $20 when other municipalities were charging but $16 and $16.50 for the same grade of coal. It was this range of prices which was responsible for the decision of the committee.
