What the Editor Hears

That the sexton of St. George's cathedral will take charge of clothing sent in for the fire sufferers in Northern Ontario and when enough has been gathered for another bale it will be packed. All clothing should be in a good condition, if there is need of a stitch put it in, there are no needles or sewing machines in the northland.

That the Cataract Golf Club has provided a good time in the great out-of-doors for its members during the season, and its cosy clubhouse is still a favorite meeting place.

That gowns for evening wear are sleeveless or the other extreme, with lace draperies called by courtesy sleeves, reaching to the hem or below it.

That the girls of Kingston should take advantage of the Girl Guide movement, well organized in our city, and join some of the patrols.

That the church and charitable organizations are lining up and taking dates for their Christmas sales.

NURSES SEND RELIEF.
To Miss Agnes Reid, Superintendent of Cobalt Hospital.

The Nurses Alumnae Association of the Kingston General Hospital today sent a big box of clothing, etc., to Miss Agnes Reid, superintendent of the Mines Hospital at Cobalt to help in the Northern Ontario relief. Miss Reid is a graduate of the Kingston training school, and the Alumnae Association voted $100 to send her some very necessary supplies for the sufferers, as her hospital is crowded. The executive, headed by Mrs. J. C. Spence, president, purchased linen, sheeting, towels, pillows, scissors, etc., to that amount, and also collected clothing from friends. They also received private money contributions of $11. All this was put together, and Miss Reid will receive a splendid assortment of useful articles by the first of the week.

JACKET BLOUSE IS WELCOME

Garment Will Help Out Milady's Wardrobe; Suitable for Women With Slender Lines.

The jacket blouse is new and something that is going to be welcomed by a lot of women as a means of helping out their wardrobe. The idea started in Paris, where all through the spring and summer they were worn with skirts and waists in different colorings. This is a fashion which should be confined to women with long, slender lines, because on any more robust figures it is quite an unhappy thing to break the line of waist and skirt. However, there are many tall, thin figures in the world and they will look lovely in the jacket blouse.

It is, really, a blouse with a long waistline and a tight, rather wide band about the hips. It is made with a low, rolled collar or with a high one that buttons under the chin, and its material is some heavy colorful fabric suitable to the street, with a covering coat, that makes it a sort of coat in itself—hence its name, the jacket blouse. The favorite material for this kind of blouse is a fabric called matisse. It has a rather thick, almost quilted, silk surface and over all an embroidered design.

These outer blouses are often worn with plaited skirts of black satin or crepe, and they are desirable, too, with the lighter weight woolen materials. They will naturally grow more in favor as the cooler days approach, for they are essentially the thing to wear before one needs to don a top coat of any great warmth or weight. They are at their loveliest when more or less brightly colored. There is one sort in black and white which is very effective, the embroidery done in black on a white ground. There is another done in dull tones of red on a background of black. The red ones are extremely good looking and there are others which will thrill those who naturally like to wear costumes of this sort.

BLACK GOWN EVER POPULAR

The black gown always claims its right to recognition, and erpe is the leading material. Of course the skirt must be of uneven length and the bodice plain. This model is attractive.

THE STOUT WOMAN'S GOWNS
Dresses for the Party Matrons Are Still Cut With the Low Waist-line.

Dresses designed for stout figures are still cut with the low waist-line, and both panels and side drapery are employed to relieve the skirt of its otherwise plain appearance. The overlapping side, caught up at the side front with double clasps or cabochon, is newer than the panels, which, however, are by no means out of favor.

The stout woman has always worn her skirts quite long and therefore not much change in the length is noted. Moderately large sleeves are advocated for stout women, as a tight sleeve emphasizes the circumference of an abnormally sized arm, and where artistic effect is aimed at cord or very slender string girdles are used rather than crushed belt or sash.

The neck outline is round, square or pointed, according to taste. But fashion gives the preference to round necks where they are becoming. The same materials are used for large sizes as for the normal, and dark colors such as black, navy and the warmer, richer tones of brown are shown chiefly.

The Sailor Hat.
A trimming to make the sailor wearable for nearly any occasion is made by sewing ribbon flowers to a detachable hat band. Black or Copenhagen velvet can be put on and off under a bow at the center back. In front, colorful flowers made of any fabric can be sewed on so they will not interfere with the removal of the band. Sewing on the flowers in the Bat French fashion is a good style. For this purpose daisies, small rosebuds and forget-me-nots are suitable. Silver or gold ribbon, with green or heena-toned grapes, is another trimming to transform the everyday hat.

LAUNCHING A "DEB"

IN NEW YORK
Never in the history of New York society has there been a greater need of a clearing house for debutante affairs than at present. There will be many young aspirants to the favors of society during the coming season, and their parents and other relatives are endeavoring to arrange matters so that there shall be no clashing of important events.

As regards the fixed custom of holding afternoon receptions for the purpose of introducing debutantes time does not change it and it seems the best method of bringing together the greatest number of the friends of the family, most of whom are indifferent to dances. It does not matter how many receptions are given on a stated day, for all can be accomplished and even several dances on one night give zest and variety and the younger element takes great delight in going from one dance to another. Many dates are under consideration for dances, but it will be several weeks before such matters can be straightened out to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The coming fashionable season will be rather short, as Ash Wednesday will fall on February 14th, and that will give but a short six weeks after the beginning of the new year for private dances, which this year will have to start early next month.
