What the Editor Hears

That we will all wear a poppy on Armistice Day.

That the turkeys who survived Thanksgiving are beginning to dread Christmas.

That yards of tri-color ribbon will be sold in the Kingston shops for Saturday's big game and the florists will do a large business in yellow mums.

That football is more popular than badminton in Kingston for only a few enthusiasts turned up at the Armouries on Saturday afternoon, and a very few more came in for tea after the game.

That the popular velvet frocks which are good for afternoon and evening wear are most durable as well as smart.

That the ready sale of home made cooking at church and charitable bazaars show the demand for good home made food and a chance for some good cook to start a home bakery.

That as there has been more work for the men this year it is hoped that the families in need of help will not be so numerous, but there will be many a home that will not have a visit from Santa Claus unless he has had a contribution to his pack from some kind hearted citizens.

DIOCESAN MISSION BOARD

Of Anglican Church W. A. Holds First Monthly Meeting at St. James'.

St. James' parish hall was filled on Monday evening with women interested in missions, when the Diocesan Board of the Women's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting. Mrs. Havelock Price, the president, in the chair, Mrs. R. F. Segaworth, Toronto, for several years before her marriage, recording secretary of the board, has made herself a life member of this diocesan branch.

The reports of the officers were heard with interest. Mrs. A. N. Lee, superintendent of St. George's Juniors, and secretary for junior work, gave an encouraging report of the branches and of her own branch in particular, that had on Tuesday packed a box of Christmas toys for 86 children at Cumberland House, Saskatchewan.

Instead of the letters from the branches, reports from the members of the board who had attended the annual meeting of the Dominion Board in Toronto were heard. Miss E. Van Straubense, secretary for the girls and candidates, told of visiting Trenton at the deanery meeting and the formation of a branch of 'teen age girls. Referring to the Toronto meeting she told her hearers of the decision to allow a good deal of latitude in regard to the name of the girls' branches and in reference to the candidates for the mission field she spoke warmly of the excellent work done by the inter-denominational school of missions under Dr. Lovell Murray, which she explained was filling a long felt want in fitting candidates for their varied work.

Miss Marion Lewis, the treasurer, said this year the dominion treasurer reported there was no deficit, the balance being on the right side, and told of the telegram from the Bishop of Algoma asking for assistance in restoring the church buildings destroyed in Northern Ontario and the ready response of the meeting in sending $2,000 on the spot.

Miss Muckleston had attended the Leaflet conference and announced that after January '23 the "Letter Leaflet" would be no more, but "The Living Message," an illustrated magazine, would be an old friend in a new dress.

Miss Louise Kirkpatrick read an encouraging report of Dorcas work, and Miss Eleanor Reynolds gave a bright talk on the work among Juniors and the Little Helpers.

St. Andrew's Day will be as usual a day of intercession for Missions with the services held in St. George's Cathedral.

Efficient Housekeeping

Have You Made One of the New One-Piece Aprons? In grandmother's time, the housekeepers' aprons were of two varieties: the blue-and-white checked gingham apron, and the plain apron. In that day, the woman who appeared in an apron which departed from these time-honored styles was considered either frivolous or peculiar.

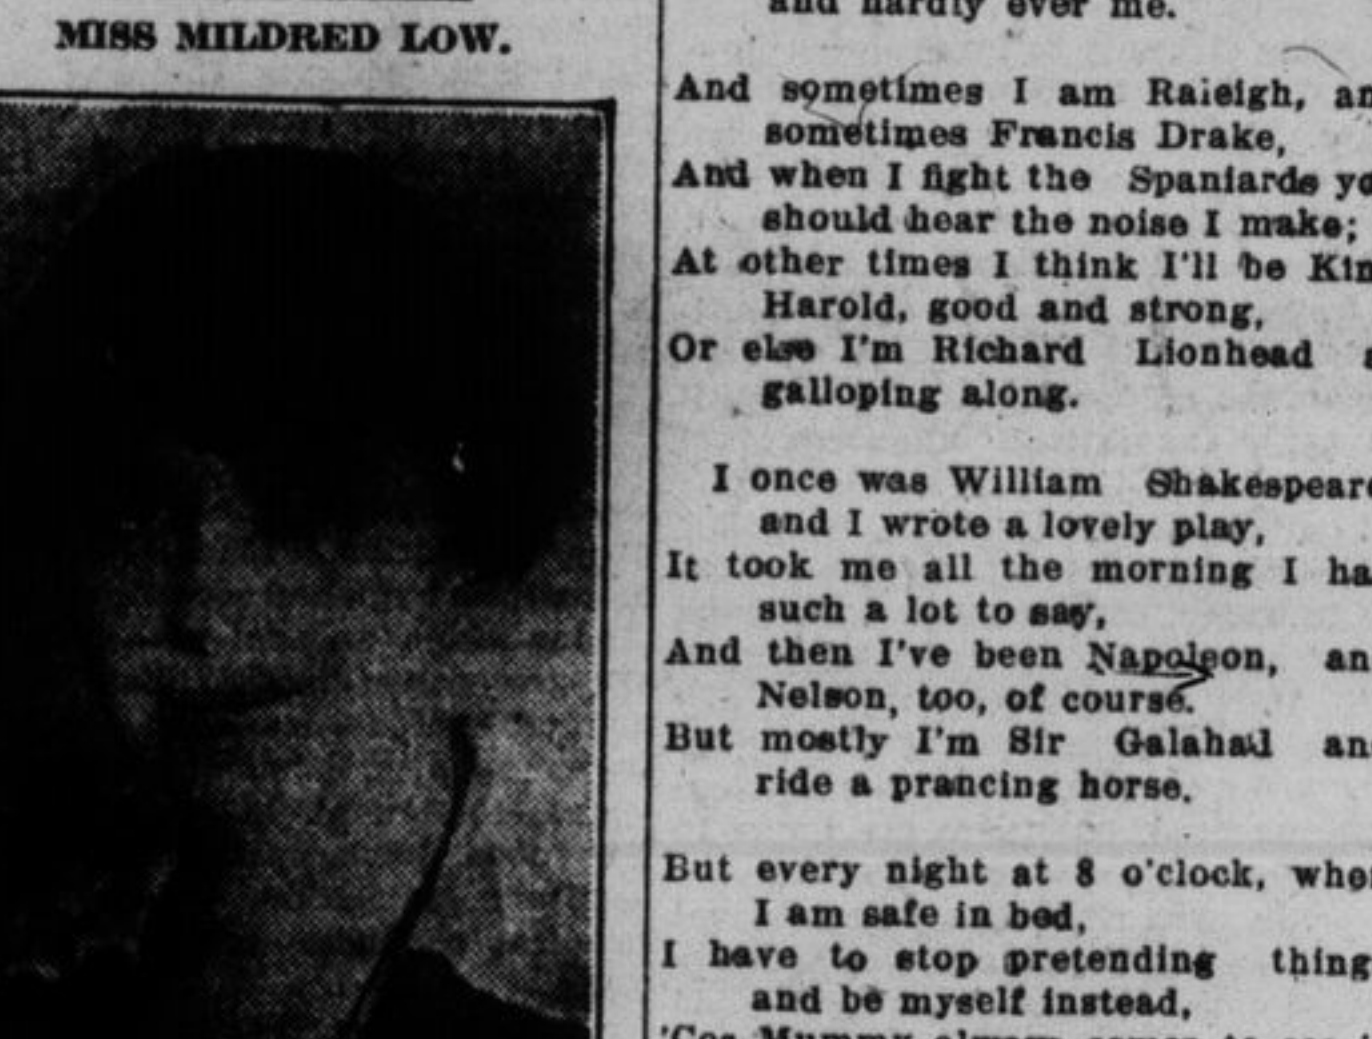

To-day, however, the housewife has a wide range of apron-styles from which to choose. She may select aprons which suit her own particular individuality or figure. If she be stout, she may wear an apron which has long, straight lines and which is brought in snugly, at the waist; for this style will make her size less apparent. If, on the other hand, she is too thin, she may wear an apron which is smocked at the shoulders, or which is gathered generously onto a yolk and not belted in.

But at last I have discovered an apron—and it is a very new style of apron—which is becoming to both stout and thin women. For the belt may be tightened for the stout woman, or put on loosely for the very thin woman. Also the apron may be made of narrow goods (to give the straight-line effect) for the stout woman, or be made of wider goods, gathered in for the thin woman. Here are the directions for making it:

How to Make One of the New One-Piece Aprons: For the woman of medium size, choose material which is 27 inches wide. (Of course a wider goods may be cut down to this width.) For this kind of apron does not go completely around you; it merely covers the front of your dress tion of her faithful and willing service, in the work of Calvary church. She was presented with a case of sterling silver tea spoons, also a silver sugar shell, from the Ladies' Missionary Auxiliary. Refreshments were served and a pleasant time spent, closing by singing "God be with you till we meet again."

MISS MILDRED LOW.

Miss Mildred Low, who has joined the staff of H. R. Charlton, chief of the general advertising department of the Grand Trunk Railway, as literary editor, is a journalist of wide experience with Ottawa, Montreal, New York and Vancouver papers. For some years she was connected with the Ottawa Free Press, where she edited a woman's page under the name of "Marie" and did special articles. She was also for some time on the editorial staff of the Montreal Star. In 1913, as a member of the Canadian Women's Press Club, she attended the triennial convention of that organization in Edmonton, and remained in the west editing the Sunshine society department of the Vancouver Daily Sun.

The new member of the general advertising department of the Grand Trunk Railway is a daughter of the late Canon George J. Low, D.D., Ottawa, who was one of the most scholarly men of his time in the Anglican church in Canada, a brilliant preacher and a writer of note.

To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

THURSDAY, NOV. 9.

There is prospect of an eventful day, judging by the predominant planetary rulership. With the radical nature of Uranus, in trine with Luna, there is the forecast of a sudden change, removal or journey, important and far-reaching in its results. The promise of definite benefit and fulfilled ambitions is abetted by the trine between the luminaries, which spurs on toward the desired goal. But care should be given the health lest it prove an interference or cause anxiety.

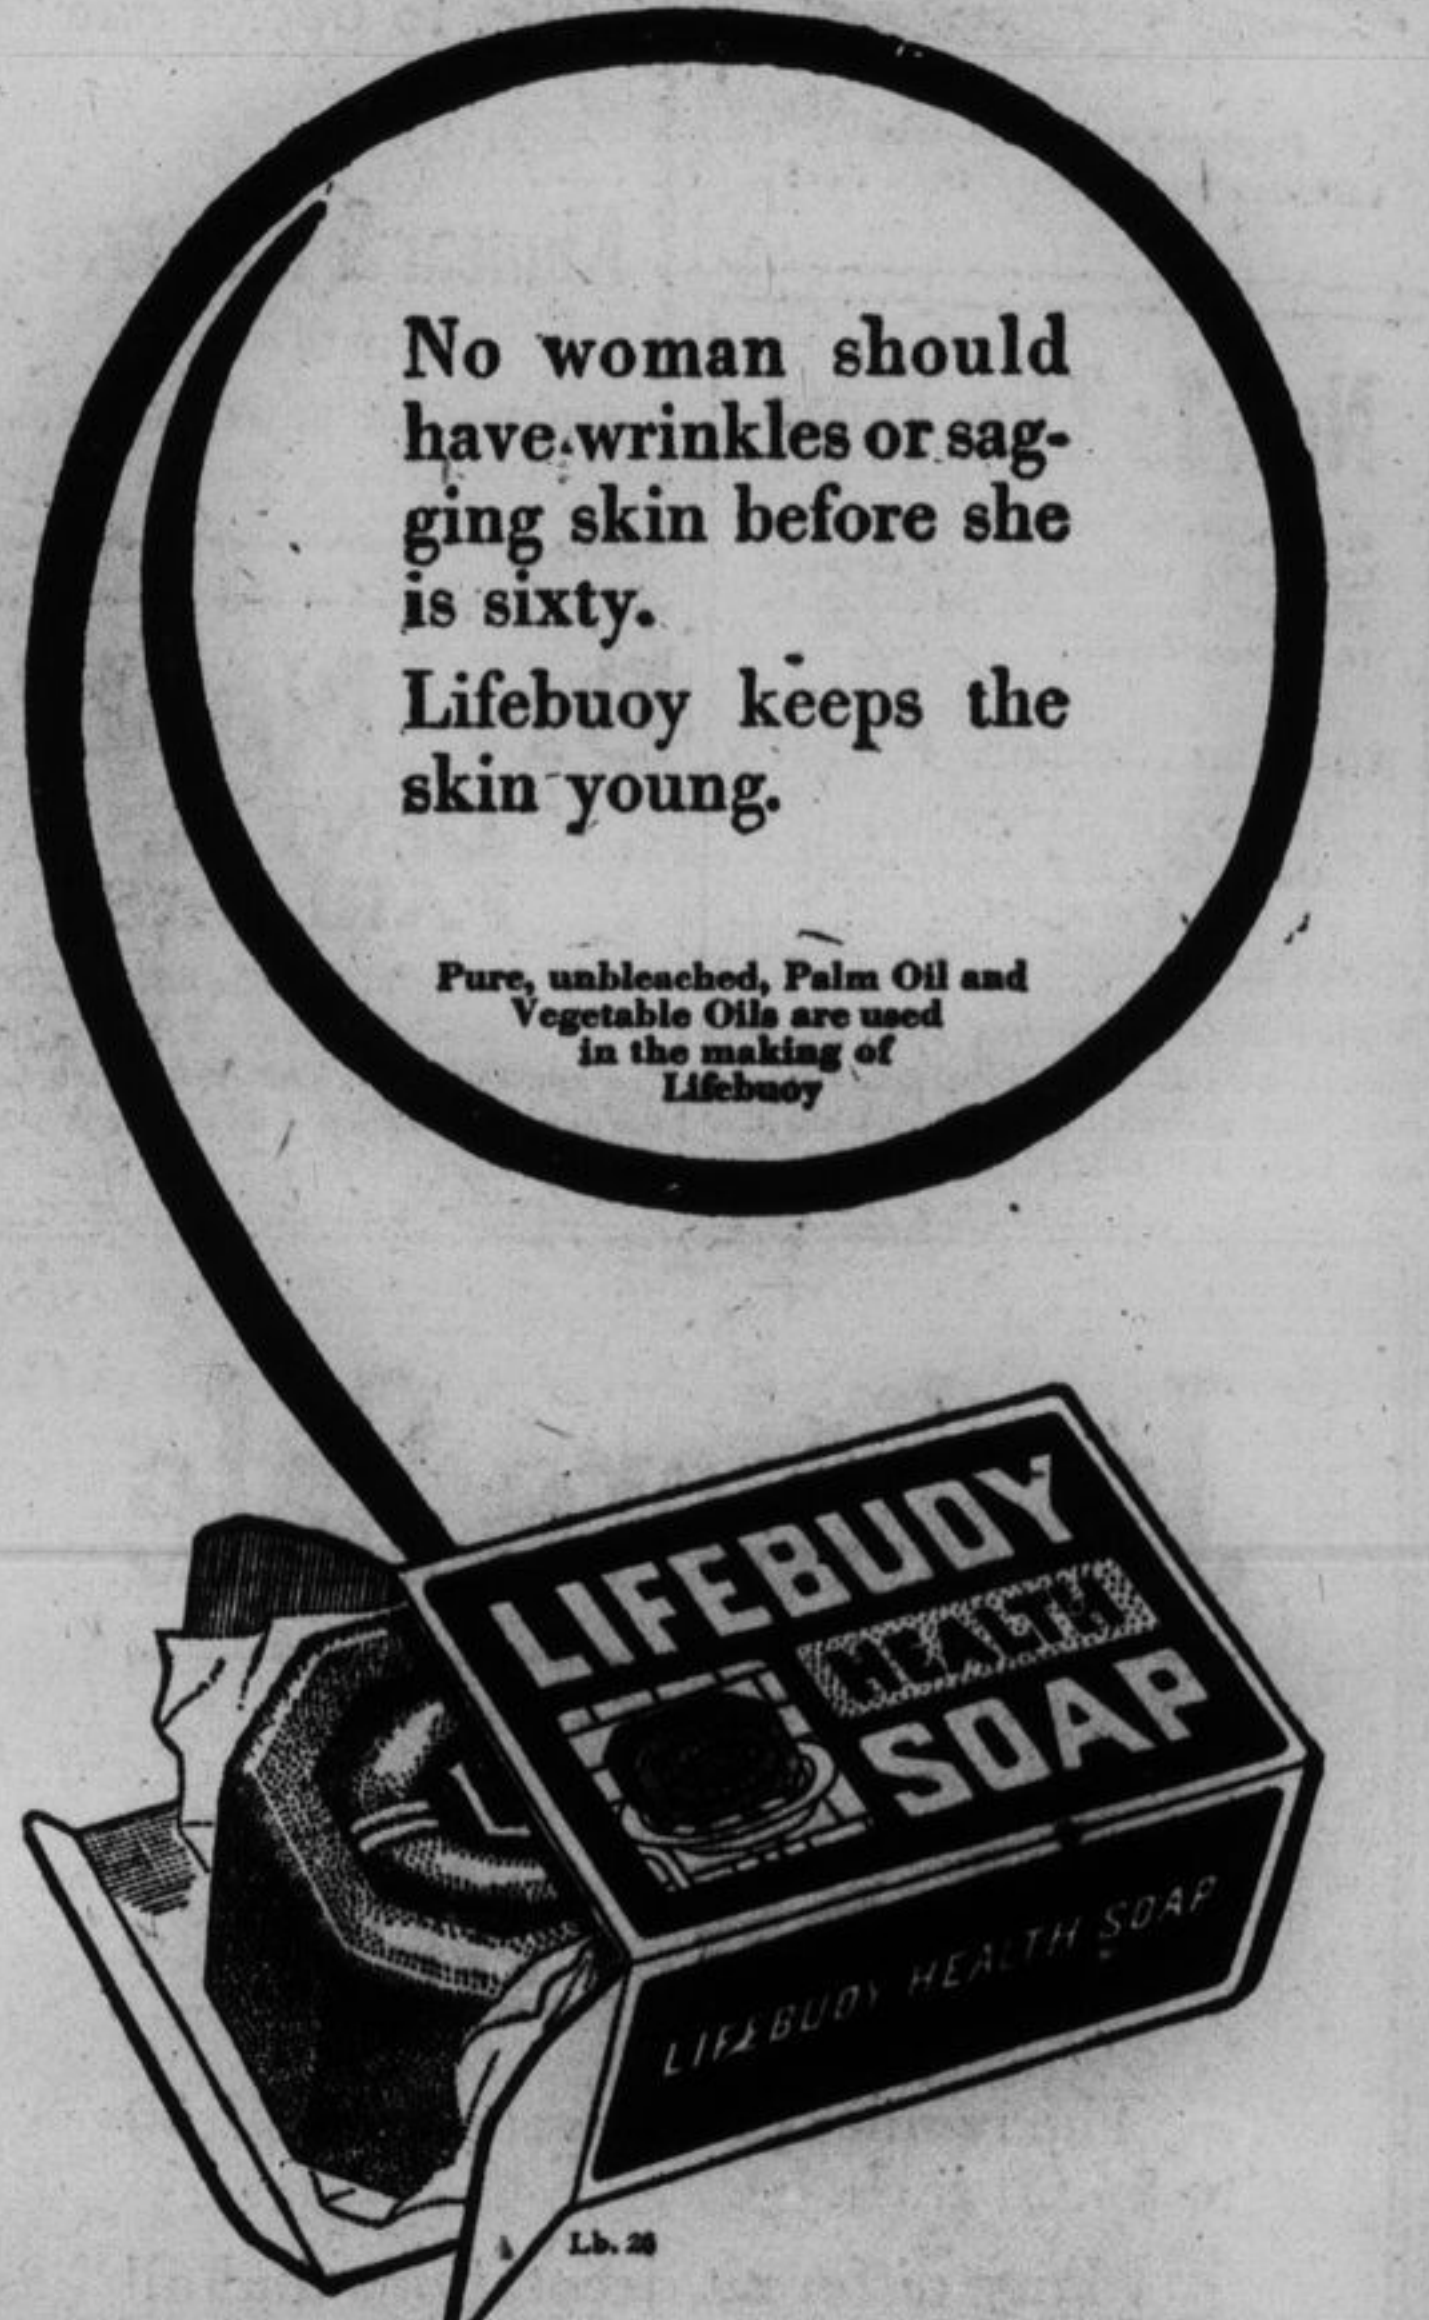

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of important change or removal possibly attended by travel. These should be advantageous, but the health should not be permitted to be an obstructing force. A child born on this day will be original, inventive, popular and may attain into public prominence, but may meet with many difficulties.
