THE INDIA GREY-NECKED CROW

The gladness of everything? "Sunrise and the bugles blowing in the morn so sweet, and fair, 'Tis time to be up and going, 'Caw the crows, who are everywhere."

"I think I told you, Teddy," said Uncle Frank, "that the Colombo crow picks up the big liners far out at sea. I was coming up from Singapore one time and I had just asked the captain how many miles we were from Ceylon, for we could just see the coastline in the dim distance, when an old crow fluttered into the rigging. "Rather an early arrival," I said, but the captain only laughed, and a young lady standing near smilingly remarked that the crow had probably called early to avoid the rush. There were plenty of the black imps around before we anchored. Having met one at sea, the crow continues the acquaintance and there are very few places where he is not to be met pulling off some piece of rascality or other. I will never forget the Colombo crows and my earlier recollections of them. I can still hear them cawing as they used to caw shortly after sunrise just about gun-fire and with everyone else asleep in the hotel, the crows were an unending source of interest to me as they went about their rascally work. Directly some servant opened a window the black rascals were on the lookout for the chance of committing a burglary.

Come On, Boys, Breakfast's Ready. Shortly after the daybreak the room boy in the hotel used to come into the bedroom and open the shutters. He would then place a tray by the bedside with tea, toast, butter and bananas, and before retiring he would say that it was six o'clock. Naturally enough one would often doze off for a few minutes unaware that a pair of black sparkling eyes were carefully noting the fact from a roof on the opposite side of the street. Finally one would begin thinking about the pleasure of a cold bath and with another yawn turn to pour out a cup of tea. It would then be discovered that someone had already had breakfast. The toast would be gone, the butter showing beak marks, while the bananas would be on the floor and the milk upset. Mr. G. N. Crow had pulled off another burglary successfully in those few minutes extra nap that had been taken. It was impossible to fool him by pretending to be asleep. The flicker of an eye-lid was enough for those wicked eyes to see. I have often seen them on the rail of the verandah or on the top of the shutters, and I once or twice saw a crow going away with a slice of toast, but I never actually caught them in the act of thieving. I believe that one crow calls the gang to breakfast, as very often they will get away with even the lumps of sugar in the sugar bowl.

Bavaria Now Has Fascist Organization

Berlin, Nov. 8.—Mobilization in Bavaria of "Fascist" similar to the Italian order, was reported in despatches from Munich today. The Fascisti have adopted the grey shirt with white and red arm bands, and a Swastika cross as their uniform. It was generally believed here that reports of a planned Bavarian "Putsch" to be led by General Ludendorff were highly exaggerated, and that the Fascist mobilization was responsible for the rumors.

scared off. It is the king-bird, who is a fighter from the word go and he just loves to get into a mix-up with a crow. Mr. Crow is no fighter when it comes to a show-down and he puts on all the steam he knows how when a king-bird gets after him. The farmers do not like the crow and he is often shot; although he is frequently quick enough to see the flash from the gun and dodge in time. When he is dead he is buried, as even the lowest of low will not eat the flesh of the crow. He is great on garbage of all kinds and in this respect he helps to keep disease away, which I think, 'Teddy,' is about his only good point.

Uncle Frank tells a tale about devils tomorrow.

USE OF D. C. AND A. C. MOTORS It has already been pointed out that an electric motor is almost identical with a generator in structure, but its function is reversed: it converts electrical power into mechanical power. It is important to have the motor suited to the kind of circuit on which it is to be used: a.c. or d.c., the right voltage, &c. Common voltages are 110 to 120; 220 to 240; 500 to 550; also for a.c. 440. Lower voltages may be used on battery circuits. A.c. motors, like generators, may be single phase, two phase, three phase, &c.; however, in radio single phase is the rule, especially with small units. D.C. motors may have series, shunt, or compound excitation. D.C. SHUNT MOTOR—If a shunt generator is used for charging a storage battery and the engine is cut off, the generator will continue to run provided the battery is large enough, but an ammeter in the circuit shows that the current has reversed. The battery is dis-

HONEYCOMB THREE COIL MOUNTING The illustration shows an excellent mounting for honeycomb or duo lateral inductance coils. The control handles is the special feature of this type, permitting a very delicate system of adjustment not usually found in coil mountings. This feature keeps the operator's hand away from the coils and prevents any body capacity effect. It is finished in polished bakelite and has as a handsome appearance. The coil terminals are connected direct to six standard binding posts on the back of the panel.

LORD BEAVERBROOK GIVES THE CREDIT TO DOHERTY

For Educating British Public in Regard to Canadian Cattle Embargo.

Dresden, Ont., Nov. 8.—Hon. Manning Doherty quite shares the recently expressed opinion of his colleague, Hon. Peter Smith, that to the former belongs the "whole credit" for bringing the British people to a proper frame of mind in connection with the embargo on Canadian cattle. At a meeting in the new agricultural building here last night, attended by about 800 farmers, the minister of agriculture produced a cablegram from Lord Beaverbrook stating that Mr. Doherty it was who was mainly responsible for educating the British people up to the pitch of action in the matter.

No Ground for Charges. London, Ont., Nov. 8.—"I believe Westminster hospital to be an exceptionally well managed institution," Dr. Beland said after his investigation yesterday afternoon. He also stated that he believed that there was absolutely no foundation to the charges.

"THE SHELL THAT HIT GERMANY HARDEST" "SHELL MOTOR SPIRIT" The last word in gasoline. It is an established fact that of every dollar spent in Low Grade Gasoline 30 cents never turns a wheel. Low grade gasoline is sluggish. It vaporizes slowly and incompletely—Your motor coughs and spits in starting. Raw fuel blows out of the exhaust and never does a stroke of work. Raw fuel trickles past the piston rings, cuts the lubrication film and thins out the crankcase oil. Carbon forms on the piston heads and valves. With "Shell" your car starts with a zip. Shell enters the cylinders in an atomized mist which explodes completely—This means clean carbonless combustion—This means full power, quick starting and snappy pickup. Sustained power on the hills—This means extra mileage on the lean 15 to 1 mixture. The Shell Company of Canada Ltd. PHONE 2107W
