On Saturday afternoon Mrs. R. J. Vair, Glenburnie, was the hostess of an exceedingly pleasant tea dance for her daughter, Miss Harriet Vair, the guests motoring out to the big country house, an ideal place for a party, after the match, and finding hot tea and coffee and blazing fires awaiting them. Mrs. L. T. Best presided at the tea table in the dining-room, where Queen's red, blue and yellow was the color scheme carried out in the candles that reflected their light in the surface of the polished table and in the yellow chrysanthemums in the tall crystal vase on the lace centre. As many of the guests were Torontoians, there were some rejoicing voices among the visitors, but the excellent music and good floor soon put an end to all but happy thoughts and the party was a most successful

one. Among those present were Miss Caroline Mitchell, Miss Grace Dunlop, Miss Nevada Best, Miss F. Baxter, Miss Anella Minnes, Miss Jean Macdonald (Sunbury), Miss Isabel Loughlin, Miss McIlroy, Miss Wigner (Toronto), Messrs. Grant Minnes, Gordon Cunningham, George Vair, Sheriff Vair, Donald Cameron, Ross Richardson (Gananoque), Dr. Baldwin, Cadets Dunbar, McMahon, Trent, Labatt and Mickles.

Young Milton Mouse and Thomas Cat had hearts that both went pit-a-pat whenever Mary Mouse was seen. They fought for her with order laws. But Milton was, while Thomas drowned.

Since then Young Milton Mouse has found His children's noise disturbs his calm. And oftentimes he envies Tom. Moral: Love thrills both mice and men. But Wedlock's something else - pain. —Eug. Jr.

What the Editor Hears

That a visit to the Orphans' Home on Union street, will always be welcomed by the kindly matron and the building is well worth seeing as well as the bright little inmates.

That the skirts worn at the Armistice ball in Montreal were quite long. Toronto papers report the same vintage and in Kingston the new frocks were much longer.

That if you have an embroidered shawl of your grandmother's in your cedar chest this is the time to take it out for it will be the most fashionable evening wrap this winter.

That the fine appearance of the vestibule of St. George's Cathedral, in which the floor has been tiled and the walls decorated by the Churchwomen's Aid, was much admired by the former members of the parish in town for the Armistice service.

That now we have the vote, every woman should learn to use her privilege intellectually. The eve of an election is not the time to get an unbiased opinion of our country's needs.

That stirring tales of the heroism of the children in the fire zone are coming in; little ones caught alone by the fire fiend in out of the way places, bringing even smaller ones to safety.

MARJORIE HAMILTON

NOTED IMPERSONATOR

Edna Thomas in Montreal Herald.

Yesterday we had an inspiration! It came while sitting in the back row of His Majesty's Theatre watching our own boys in their famous revue, "The Dumbells," "Marjorie" Hamilton, tall, graceful, alluring, with the suggestion of a dimple in her delicate chin, and a coquettish beauty spot adding to the brilliancy of her dark blue eyes, was pouring out her heart to an all-responsive audience in a rich contralto that left nothing to be desired. For a moment we closed our eyes and saw again a mental picture of the days gone by. Marjorie, stripped to the waist, covered with the dirt and filth of trenches, serving the guns, watching their ceaseless toll of human life. But Marjorie was Rosa Hamilton then, and a regular fellow, as anyone would know who was lucky enough to peep behind the scenes and hear the real man-talk that came from her delicate lips.

Was Adjusting Wig. "Why not a little chat with Marjorie?" thought we, and our suggestion was made to our partner, seconded and carried. We found Marjorie without her wig; "cooling off," she told us, modestly adjusting it on her caddy-cropped head and arranging it so that only the tips of her ears were visible. Her gown was blue, luxurious and silken, cut very low in front, and revealing a generous amount of back that would have done justice to Kitty Gordon.

"Marjorie," said we, after getting acquainted, "tell us, have you ever had a real fight?"

"Only once," returned the blue-eyed goddess, "that was when the stage carpenter threw a chair at me and nearly killed me. Of course, I had my wig on then and my make-up."

"One simply couldn't fight with such cumbersome drawbacks?" was asked.

"Well, hardly." But we had more interesting things to discuss than the prowess of man.

There were shoes and skirts and heels and heaps of things of interest to women, and Marjorie was equal to them all.

Likes Sheath Gowns. "The long skirts? I adore them. They are very becoming to me and to all women. I wish they would introduce the sheath gown again. I would enjoy displaying more limb."

"Oh, Marjorie, naughty," said our partner.

When a Lovely New Gown met a hot chicken patty!

You can imagine the catastrophe for both gown and patty! The latter was beyond recovery, but nobody cared. And the gown?—It looked hopeless until entrusted to our expert cleaning, when every trace of the late lamented chicken vanished.

Whatever the spot or stain we know the process that removes it. When your belongings meet with disaster, don't experiment with first aid. Send them to us and their spotless beauty will be restored.
