REX STOCK COMPANY IN VERY FUNNY COMEDY

"And She Turned Up" De-lighted Audience at the Grand Opera House.

"A laugh from start to finish," was the verdict of those who had the privilege of attending the first performance of "And She Turned Up," which was presented at the Grand Opera House by the Rex Stock Company on Thursday evening. It is without doubt one of the funniest comedies which this popular company has presented for the approval of Kingston audiences during its second year's stay in Kingston. "Bill" Yale, who plays the part of Caraway Bones, the undertaker, is a scream in himself, and kept the audience in roars of laughter. To marry a charming widow, with a grown up son and daughter, and later find that the widow's husband was not lost at sea, as was supposed, is the experience of "Bones." When the undertaker first paid a visit to his newly-acquired family, he met with a very cool reception, which terminated in his being thrown into the pond, and it is beyond the power of description to say what "Bill" looked like when he was fished out, and his clothes began to dry, and likewise shrink. "Father Medway" (Howard Brown), finally turns up from the sea, after being lost for ten months, and he is followed by a dark shadow in the person of a native of Africa (Hazel Williams), whom he is bequiled into marrying. The fun then comes faster, but as the riddle unravels, it reveals the fact that the Captain was not legally married and the shadows begin to get brighter.

Rex Snelgrove and Zana Vaughn, who play the parts of the son and daughter, George Medway and Sabina Medway, as usual fill their roles perfectly. "Billy" Seymour as "General Batic" is exceptionally good. The role of "Mary Medway," the unfortunate Captain's wife, is cleverly portrayed by Florence Williams. Gloria Machan as "Ada Batic," and Joe Kelly as "Nod Stedam" play their parts well. Hazel Williams plays every part she is assigned to in a remarkable manner, and to see her as the "darkey" is a treat.

Howard and Hazel Brown furnished a vaudeville number between the second and third acts which was loudly applauded. Those wishing a good laugh should witness "And She Turned Up," which will be repeated at the Grand tonight, Saturday matinee and night.

FIRST KINGSTON VOICE TO BE SENT BY RADIO

Jack Elder, Scotch Entertainer, Sang on Wednesday Evening.

The distinction of being the first Kingstonian to have his voice broadcast goes to Jack Elder, the well-known local tobaccoist, who is better known outside the city and in some circles within it as a very able singer and Scotch entertainer. On Wednesday evening the Canada Radio Stores tried out their broadcasting apparatus, much to the delight of many amateurs in the district and the first voice to carry over the air was that of Mr. Elder, singing some of his favorite Scotch songs.

Reports from the district indicate that this first concert was a great success. A telephone message from Clayton, N. Y., on the following day to the Canada Radio Stores, said that they heard Mr. Elder wonderfully well and that they wanted to hear some more in the near future. "Jack" Elder's services as an entertainer are so much in demand that he hardly knows how to keep up with invitations. The latest one is from down in Gleggarry County and is for New Year's eve. He may be forced to refuse some but those who know him rather than that this invitation will not go unheeded.

FOUR KINGSTON GIRLS GAVE UNIQUE CONCERT

Big Audience Enjoyed Every Moment of Programme at Grant Hall.

The concert given in Grant Hall on Thursday evening under the auspices of Queen's Alumnae Association was unique, for the programme was given entirely by four Kingston girls, three of whom have travelled far afield to perfect their great musical talents, and have brought home to our quiet city the splendid result of their labors. The large audience gave these young girls a hearty reception and enjoyed every moment of the delightful programme. The two bright daughters of Principal Taylor, who Kingston now claims as her own, played the opening group for violin and piano. Miss Leslie Taylor who has studied in New York, has twice played with a Chataqua company touring the Western States and is now first violin in the Grand Opera House orchestra, was accompanied cleverly by her sister, Miss Lois Taylor, an undergraduate of Queen's. The sisters play beautifully together and Miss Leslie Taylor needs no commendations on her success as a violinist, her satisfying technique, her fire and brilliance having captivated Kingston music lovers long ago. Of the nine violin and piano numbers perhaps those which gave most pleasure to the audience were the "Suite in A Minor," (Sinding) "Nocturne," (Chopin-Wilhelm,) and "Zigennerweisen," (Sarasate) the Misses Taylor kindly responded to the applause.

Miss Phyllis Knight, who has studied the piano abroad has been little heard by the Kingston public since her return and her exquisite music was listened to with delight, a perfect technique, sympathy and charm characterize her music, her numbers were well chosen and as Miss Jean Chown, accompanist, she excelled. "My Heart ever Faithful Back-Lavigne" was her first number, "Concert-Étude" (Liszt) and "Scherzo" Chopin were remarkably beautiful and she was recalled to play once more. Miss Jean Chown, whom Toronto would claim, but who is a Kingston girl, sang first, three songs by Tchaikowsky her great voice, floating out through the large hall with utmost ease. Miss Chown's wonderful range grows more wonderful as the months pass, her high notes are marvellous for a contralto whose lower register seems well nigh perfect. The next group included "Prelude," Scott, Chaminade's lovely "Silver Ring" and "The Shepherd's Song," (Elgar) The last group "Eastacy," with a violin obligato by Miss Taylor; the dear old Scotch song, "Loch Lomond" and "St. Nicholas Day" (Martin) Miss Chown gracefully responded to the applause of the audience by singing "Coming Through the Rye."
