Laundry Comfort

During the Winter it is often found that the basement is not suited for Laundry purposes. We have what is called a Laundry Sink, which is a White Enamel Laundry Tub, and a deep Kitchen Sink combined, which can be installed in your kitchen. Space required 4 feet. When the Laundry Tub is not in use there is a cover which closes and acts as a drain board to the Sink.

Price, complete $65.00
2 Part White Enamel Laundry Tubs $55.00
2 Part Cement Laundry Tubs $28.00

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Anniversary Services Sunday
Prof. McCrimmon, McMaster University, Preacher.

The anniversary of the First Baptist church was fittingly observed by special services on Sunday. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and ferns and special music was rendered by the choir.

The services were conducted by Rev. J. S. LaFlair, the pastor, who briefly reviewed the progress of the church during the year and emphasized the importance of the anniversary. Rev. A. L. McCrimmon, M.A., LL.D., professor of McMaster University, Toronto, was the special preacher at both the morning and evening services. There were large congregations, many students from Queen's university being in attendance.

At the morning service, Dr. McCrimmon spoke on "The Mission of the Church in this Age." "Before the war," said he, "the church was being criticized, but it always will be under criticism. Some claimed that the church was not an essential, but what are the facts? You find in every department of church life greater activity than ever before. What about the church and its functioning and the relationship of the individual soul to God? We are brought to the conclusion from a survey of the past and the present that the greater work in which a man can engage is to bring the wandering souls back to God. There is no one who would dare bring his suffering soul into the presence of God. We need a mediator, someone who will stand between us and God. If this were not so there would be no need for a Saviour, and this earth of ours would rot, and men would be going down to Christless graves. But God sent Jesus Christ into the world as God himself. When the scientist looks about the world he finds things in the state of a forgiven soul. Christianity begins in the heart of man and reaches to the ends of the earth. What did Lloyd George say regarding the failure of the Genoa conference? He said that "Christianity had not focused its power there."

Dr. McCrimmon saw in the world conditions growing out of the war greater need for Christianity. While it was true that in all vocations there was instability and uncertainty, this was not so in Christianity. "It was necessary that men should obtain a proper estimate of the profession they were choosing. What is it worth? It must be judged in so far as it lifts the soul of man to God. The whole financial, economic and industrial life of man is merely a means to an end, the commissariat, so to speak, of life. The religious profession is the means to a higher existence for the development of man in mind and body. It will not do to live in the past. We are in a dynamic age. Everything must be worth something and must do something whether it be in science, theology or in politics. The call of the ministry is to meet a need. It is the call of God and we must build on a foundation of righteousness and truth."

"The world war taught us to look at the reality of things, and while there is a time for meditation you have got to live out these things in the life of mankind. God is seen in the progress of science and industry. You not only have the gospel but you must read it into the things of everyday life, for it is the men and end women to whom God speaks. This was so of the prophets, who were not only reporters, but lived out the gospel in their own lives. Today it is most essential that the mind, heart and will be committed to the life of Christ."

Dr. McCrimmon's evening subject was "The New Birth," which was a continuation, or enlargement of the morning theme, the object being to indicate the ways in which the right relations between a soul and its creator can be restored.

The choir, ably led by S. A. Salisbury, gave generous and much appreciated assistance at both services. In the morning there was a duet by Mrs. G. Harold Clarke and James Saunders, and an anthem in which Mrs. G. Stenton, Miss Ruth LaFlair and Mr. Saunders took the special parts. The evening programme included a solo by J. P. LaFlair, and anthem by choir, with obligato by Miss Ruth LaFlair. Rev. D. Laing, former pastor assisted at the morning service, and is to give a historical sketch of the church at the prayer service Wednesday evening. The special offering was a generous one.

Good Cause for Thanks.

An old deacon, having occasion to spend a night at an hotel, was assigned a room containing three single beds, two of which already had occupants. Soon after the light was extinguished, one of those began to snore so loudly as to prevent the deacon from getting to sleep. The tumult increased as the night wore away, until it became absolutely fearful. Some two or three hours after midnight the snorer turned himself in bed, gave a hideous groan, and became silent. The deacon had supposed the third gentleman asleep, but at this juncture he heard him exclaim: "He's dead. Thank God. He's dead!"

Would Call Again.

A colored woman entered a photographer's the other day and said: "Does yo' take chillun?" "Yes, ma'am, certainly," said the photographer. "How much?" "Two dollars a dozen, ma'am cabinet size." "Well," said the colored woman, "ah ain't got but eight so far, but if yo'll kindly wait ah'll call ag'in in a few years."
