"PRETTY PLEASE"

By Juanita Hamel

Is there a girl who doesn't keep somewhere near her a picture or a figure or perhaps—who knows—just a dream in her heart of—Cupid? It may be only a nebulous wish—a hope—maybe a prayer, but it's always there—the hunger of the heart!

FOR AFTERNOON TEA.

No matter how dainty the cakes bought at the confectioners may be, we all know the delight of seeing a plate of real home made tea cakes, when we drop in for tea beside a glowing grate fire. Here are some special dainties for the hostess to make in her own kitchen.

Preserve Tea Buns.
4 cups bread-dough, ¼ cup finely chopped citron, Caraway seed, ½ cup sugar 3 beaten eggs, 3 table-spoons butter, Strawberry preserves.

Work into the bread-dough the sugar, butter and the citron, add the eggs well beaten. Set to raise, and when double in bulk form into small biscuits, brush with egg, dust with sugar and caraway seed and again raise to double in size. Bake in a moderate oven. Before placing in the oven make a depression in the center of each biscuit, using the bowl of a spoon. When cold fill the centre with strawberry preserves, or currant preserves and serve hot or cold.

Chocolate Tea Cakes.
2 eggs, 4 table-spoons soft butter, ½ cup hot water 3 table-spoons baking powder, 1 ounce grated chocolate, 1 cup sugar ½ cup strong coffee, 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, Orange icing.

Cream together the sugar and the butter and add the well-beaten eggs. Add the coffee and the chocolate dissolved in the hot water, and then stir in the flour into which the baking-powder has been stirred and a fourth teaspoon of salt. Add the cinnamon and a little vanilla if you like. Add sufficient flour to roll out nicely, but be careful not to get them too stiff. Roll out about one-fourth inch thick, and cut into small rounds. Bake in a rather quick oven. Cover with an orange icing, and then with melted chocolate.

What Queen's Girls Are Doing

The annual Levana tea was held on Saturday in Grant Hall when the candidates for office. In the Alma Mater Society were on hand to canvass Levana and to spend money lavishly to get on the right side of their constituents. Mrs. Norman Miller and Miss Margaret Porteous received the guests, who were lured to the various tables. Sweets were sold at a pretty booth by Miss Anella Minnes and Miss Jean Douglas. Miss Lilian Potter and Miss Mary Kirkland sold Queen's calendars, the cushions were in charge of Miss Louise Fletcher and Miss Marion Matthews, Miss Isabel Sparrow sold ice cream cones and Miss Ruth Evanson and Miss Eunice Sampson, the dainty Indian lace. Fortunes were told and quite early in the afternoon Queen's victory was foretold and the witch congratulated on her foresight when the joyful news came by radio. The Wise Women were Miss Sara Burns, Miss Georgina Conklin and Miss Marjorie Booth. At the tea table with its yellow mums Queen's colors and white and gold candles, Miss Evelyn Bennington and Miss Grace Dunlop made the tea, assisted by a committee of which Miss Margaret Summery was convener, Miss Elsie Davidson, Miss Freda Graves, Miss Ethel Sloan, Miss Melva Eagleton, Miss Marion Spence, Miss Helen Wilson, Miss Marion McPayden and Miss Helen Miller. Tiny images of Queen's rugby team were auctioned off, the Realities putting up a friendly rivalry which created much fun. Dancing went on to the music of the girls' orchestra.

In the evening the high spirits of the young people of Queen's had to have some outlet for the excitement and delight of the rugby team's victory, so on Saturday evening an impromptu dance was arranged in Grant Hall with music by Harmony Six orchestra and Mrs. W. E. McNeill and Mrs. J. F. Macdonald as chaperons.

The candidates for the A.M.S. will visit the Residences this week and incidentally have a good time while they are canvassing Levana.

The Medical dance will be held in Grant Hall on Thursday.

Recital on Sunday Night.
A recital of sacred music was given by Mrs. A. R. B. Williamson, Mus. Bac., in St. James' church after the evening service, with the following programme:
Organ—(a) "Fete Dieu" (Dubois)
(b) "Allegro" from 2nd Symphony (Vierne)
Mrs. A. R. B. Williamson.
Tenor solo—"My Hope is in the Everlasting" (Stainer)
John Tomkins.
Violin solos—(a) "Adagio" from Sonata in D (Handel)
(b) "Ere, Eli" (Hebrew Traditional Melody)
Miss Leslie Taylor.
Mezzo soprano solo—"A Prayer" (Therarne)
Miss Katherine Wright, Toronto.
Anthem—"Bless the Lord, O My Soul" (Ivanou)
The Choir.
Mrs. A. R. B. Williamson's organ numbers were remarkable for their beautiful technique, and were heard with delight. Miss Leslie Taylor's sweet violin made lovely music and Miss Katherine Wright's sympathetic, full, mezzo soprano voice was heard for the first time by the Kingston public with interest, as it is felt she is still another girl singer to bring laurels to her home town. The well-balanced choir sang the anthem with good effect.

What the Editor Hears

That the citizens who visited the Kingston office of the Bell Telephone Co., last week, will never again wonder at getting a wrong number, a mix up on the lines, or any of the accidents which mar a well nigh perfect service. They will only wonder how the clever girls at the switch board, who are under a great nerve strain for many hours with only a break of fifteen minutes now and then, manage to get the numbers as quickly and correctly as they do, and will try to be as patient as they expect the operators to be with them.

That strange as it may be, that even with the prices of the articles for sale considerably lower than a few years ago and money not over plentiful, the church and charity bazaars are realizing more than in previous years at their annual Christmas sales.

That few of the women who vote in the municipal elections would vote on a political ticket. Women usually vote for the best man, in their opinion any way.

That the makers of ready-to-wear frocks make a mistake in not varying the styles. Take the cut of the neck for instance, what woman over thirty-five looks her best in a bateau neck line? The V or the square opening is much more becoming.

That this is the time to make your Christmas cake, your mince pies and to plan your Christmas gifts.

To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble
TUESDAY, NOV. 28.
Very active and interesting conditions may be looked for on this day, according to the inciting Lunar and mutual aspects. The trine of Luna to Mercury is interpreted as inciting all manner of gainful mercantile and professional activities, especially as relating to bargain and sale, and in those transactions relating to publishing, publicity and kindred interests. A parallel pleasant and active condition may be expected in heart and home affairs, with a strong prospect of the happiest of auspices surrounding affectional matters. It is forecast by the astral sages that "the young will court and marry."
Those whose birthday it is have the augury of a successful, active and happy year, with pleasant and prosperous conditions in all their affiliations. A child born on this day will be clever, artistic, affectionate and popular. It may make a success in one of the professions, either literary or musical, or in the fine arts.
