What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

Pictures Coming to Grand.
For the first three days of next week the Grand Opera House will offer its patrons the Picture Beautiful, direct from its smashing success at the Criterion Theatre, Times Square, New York. "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night," by Gerald C. Duffy, opens on Christmas Eve in a small town with the Christmas tree and services in the little church where Martha Beecher plays the organ. Her young son, Garry, is the delight of her heart. His boyhood sweetheart, Lorna Owens, works in her stepfather's store. Things run smoothly for the young lovers until a bit of Broadway in the person of Yvonne Tyler, a dancer, strikes Paradise Valley, and Garry falls captive to the smiles of the city maiden. Garry after taking money from the safe of the old storekeeper, follows the dancer to the city. There comes periods of good clothes, gay parties, presents—and the favor of Yvonne. Garry fails to write home but the mother keeps a light burning in the windows, sure that her boy will come home at last to her whose love never falters. The gay times end with the arrest of Garry, being trapped by Yvonne into an apartment theft of the jewelry he has given her, his intention being to make restitution for the stolen money. He is sentenced to ten years in prison. The country sweetheart keeps the knowledge from the mother. Garry is instrumental in saving the warden from an attack by one of the prisoners and later there is a spectacular jail breaking with the warden carried off by the escaping men to shield themselves from the shots of the guards. The prisoners escape on a stolen engine and Garry after a thrilling fight rescues the warden just in time to escape a collision with another engine, which is one of the big thrills of the picture. For this he is pardoned and on Christmas Eve justifies his mother's faith by returning to her and the faithful sweetheart.

"What's Wrong With the Women."
That sparkling dynamo of ever-changing emotions—modern woman—is revealed in all her strength and weakness by Daniel Carson Goodman's unusual photoplay, "What's Wrong With the Women?" shown for the first time last evening at the Allen Theatre. It is a big theme upon which this powerful dramatic subject is founded. It deals not merely with individuals. Mr. Goodman, who wrote and also produced it, goes beyond the little group of interesting characters with which he tells his deeply moving story. He treats his theme in a big way and makes of it a huge canvas upon which he depicts with bold strokes the eternal struggle of the sexes. The story has to do with the lives of men and women of wealth and social position and others of lesser affluence who seek to move in the swift set. A young business man and his devoted wife live happily with their baby. The wife is led innocently into a fast circle in which she is almost engulfed. Troubles follow. Big situations occur frequently. Mr. Goodman with the facility of a master story teller, depicts his tale in vividly dramatic sequences.

At The Strand.
Jane Novak in "Colleen of the Pines," one of the best photoplays of the season, opened at the Strand last night to a well filled house. There is also a very funny comedy, "Punch the Clock," Pathe News, 10th episode of "Robinson Crusoe," and other reels of quality complete this splendid programme. Just the usual prices. A drama that moves with the refreshing sweep of a strong wind through tall timbers was revealed for the first time at the Strand Theatre last night, when "Colleen of the Pines," starring Jane Novak, was thrown upon the screen. The delicate blonde beauty of the star, her superb handling of the big scenes and the excellent support of the cast, all contributed toward the success of the production. The nobility of self-sacrifice is the theme. As the elder sister, Miss Novak takes upon her own slender shoulders the burden of a mistake committed by her younger sister. The father is a religious bigot whose family has been brought up under the most rigid regulations. They form an interesting group of characters, however, out of whose lives a strong drama has been woven. It's a Chester Bennett production.

ECCLES WAS NOT ASHORE BUT RIDING AT ANCHOR

Lost Her Rudder in Storm—Broke Loose and Is Adrift on Lake.

The schooner Katie Eccles, owned by Captain Harry Mitchell, Portmouth is still drifting in Lake Ontario at the mercy of the waves. Captain Mitchell, when speaking to Captain John Donnelly of the Donnelly Salvage and Wrecking company, on Thursday evening from Belleville, stated that during the heavy gale on Sunday evening the rudder was torn off the schooner and he and the two members of the crew were drifting at the mercy of the storm for some time. When the schooner came close to the shore of Timber Island he threw out his anchors and he remained at anchor until Wednesday night when the gale was so heavy that the anchors would not hold. He was able to get the crew off the vessel and then allowed the schooner to go adrift. When he left the Eccles he said that she was not taking water, and he thinks that unless she founders out in the lake there is a chance that she will go ashore on Amherst Island. The Schuster coal company of Belleville, to whom the coal was consigned, have hopes that the cargo may be saved.

On Friday morning, when in communication with Amherst Island by long distance telephone, the Whig was informed that none of the islanders had seen any trace of the schooner but there was a chance that she might come ashore during the day as there was quite a gale blowing.

Captain Mitchell stated that on Thursday morning he was able to see the schooner drifting down the lake about five miles from where she had lain at anchor.

Horace Taber Total Loss.
A close examination of the schooner Horace Taber, which went ashore on Sunday night one mile below Mine Mill Point Light on Simcoe Island shore, revealed the fact that the schooner would be a total loss. On Thursday Anthony Rankin, who owned the coal, and a tug owned by the Donnelly company, went out to the stranded schooner with the intention of trying to take off some of the coal. It was found that the schooner was in such a position that it was impossible to get any of the coal at present and there is no chance whatever of salvaging the schooner as she has broken her back. The coal will be turned over to the underwriters association. It is expected that an endeavor will be made to salvage the coal as soon as there is mild weather.

The Steamer Malton.

The Donnelly company had a very difficult task in releasing the steamer Malton, which went ashore at Charley Shoal two weeks ago. It required both the steamers Frontenac and Cornwall to get her free. Hydraulic jacks with one hundred tons capacity were brought into service. The steamer arrived in Kingston under her own steam and will go into the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company drydock for examination.

On Friday morning the tug Frontenac and the lighter Harry D. left for Waupoos Island to try to release the schooner Lyman Davis, which went ashore on Sunday night. It will be necessary to take off part of the coal before any pulling operations can be commenced.

Thinks Eccles Is Sunk.

A despatch from Belleville says: "The Katie Eccles is probably sunk by this time," said Capt. Mitchell, of the schooner, who arrived here today from Timber Island. He and his crew abandoned the coal laden vessel Wednesday because she was dragging at anchor. They spent Wednesday and Thursday in a brush tent, which they built on the island. They were taken Thursday at noon by the lighthouse-keeper at the Main Ducks. Capt. Mitchell leaves for Kingston this evening.

Another Big Fire at University of Montreal

Montreal, Dec. 1.—A fire which started shortly before midnight last night, did damage estimated at about three hundred thousand dollars to the dentistry and veterinary school building of University of Montreal. It was extinguished at 2:20 o'clock this morning. Nine firemen suffered injuries in the conflagration. This is the second fire in the University of Montreal within a month. An investigation will be held.
