INSPIRING ADDRESS ON WORK AMONG BOY SCOUTS

Rotarian John E. Stiles, Ottawa, Was the Speaker at Friday's Luncheon.

A most inspiring address on the work among boy scouts, was given before the members of the Kingston Rotary Club, at their noon-day luncheon, at the British-American hotel on Friday, by Prof. John E. Stiles, assistant commissioner of the boy scouts, and a member of the Ottawa Rotary Club. It is the intention of the Rotary Club to go back of the scout work in Kingston, and the address of Rotarian Stiles was brimful of timely suggestions for the carrying on of the work. The speaker punctuated his remarks with some very interesting stories to emphasize his points and he put them over in most convincing manner. The address was listened to with keen interest by all the members. It was one of the finest addresses given before the club this year. The president, Leman A. Guild, presided, and there was a good attendance of members.

Rotarian Stiles, in opening his address, revised the history of the boy scout movement, which was started in 1907 and has had a wonderful growth. There are at the present time two million scouts, the organization being world-wide. At the present time, a Canadian scout was corresponding with a scout in Australia.

The speaker expressed the hope that great interest would be taken in the scout work in Kingston. There were at the present time two troops of scouts in this city, but there should be at least four. Speaking of the work accomplished in Kingston, with the scouts, he stated that he wished to thank the citizens who had helped the boys, especially professors of the university, who had given much of their time in instructing the scouts.

Rotarian Stiles took for the title of his address, "Scouting," and asked the question, "What is Scouting?" and when he had concluded his address, the members of the club were given a great insight into the work, and everyone felt satisfied that it was indeed great work, and something worth while.

No person could listen to Rotarian Stiles' address without being touched with the appeal for work of this kind among the boys. Like at their play, the boys were put in gangs in the scouts, or what was referred to as a patrol, and everything possible was carried on to develop the lads. In the old days boys around the home were given chores to do, but today there were very few chores for a boy to do at home, and for this reason, something had to be provided to take the place of the chores. The boy scout movement stood for developing the boy along the line of health, character building and public service. All education must have health as its first object.

For Public Service.

The speaker made a strong point when he went into the question of fitting the boys for public service.

"Too many of us are content to be box cars when it is engines that we need," he said. "We need some person to do the pulling, and if democracy is to be a success, we must train the boys to take part in public organizations. The boys in Kingston should be taught that this city is a good place to live in. I hate to go into a town and have some young fellow make the remark, 'this place is dead.' You can make sure that the fellow who makes such a remark is dead."

Going into the work of the boy scouts, Rotarian Stiles stated that the chief motto was "Be Prepared," and he told how the scouts were given instruction in first aid, and all kinds of work.

"I think there is a good deal in this movement to help Canada," said the speaker. "And if this is not so, I have made a bad guess."

Many stories of the good work carried out by scouts who had been trained to think quickly and to do the right thing at the right time were told by the speaker. Scouts the world over had, by acting promptly, saved many lives.

The speaker spoke of the attitude of mind, and stated that it was the duty of the boy scouts to do a good turn to some person every day and not say anything about it. Above all things he was taught to be loyal. His training was such as to call upon him to whistle under difficulties.

Another very important matter touched on by Rotarian Stiles was that boy scouts could do more for the new Canadians than any other organization, as the boys mixed together in such a manner as to form friendships, played the same games and became interested in their scout work. The speaker referred to the various branches of the work and said that the question of religion had been raised, but the scout movement prepared the boys for religion, and handed them over to the church for this part of their training. Some people had regarded the organization as a military organization, but such was not the case. It was not anti-military, however, but was not military because others were engaged in this line of work. In the scout work, people were given a chance to do something worth while for the boys. As might be expected, there was need of discipline. Discipline was at the very foundation of education. And the idea given to the boys was that they must control themselves. The discipline must come from within. It was a fine thing for a boy to know that some person was interested in him.

Following the address, Rotarian Dr. Nash moved a vote of thanks to the speaker and paid a warm tribute to the work that he has been carrying on among the boy scouts. The vote of thanks was carried amidst much applause.

KINGSTON'S MILK SUPPLY IS REPORTED REAL GOOD

By Queen's Bacteriologist—Board of Health Hears Complaints of Nuisances.

Kingston has a good milk supply, according to Dr. James Miller, pathologist of Queen's university, who made a report to the Board of Health at its meeting on Friday afternoon. Dr. Miller made bacteriological examination of 107 samples of milk submitted to him by Inspector G. W. Bell. The results were very favorable, and an improvement over last year was noted. Kingston's milk supply compares favorably with those of Edinburgh, Scotland, Manchester, England, and other large cities which have a high standard.

Dr. Williamson, medical health officer, remarked that the report of the Queen's pathologist was very satisfactory indeed. It was pleasing to know that Kingston had such a good milk supply.

Inspector Bell reported as to milk tests made. During November he had examined 247 cows. He found a big improvement all round in regard to the milk conditions.

Mrs. D. A. Volume asked if it was right for a storekeeper to keep a pail of milk on the counter without a covering. Inspector Bell said it would be better to have some covering on it, although milk needed ventilation. It should be kept in a clean and sanitary place, as required by the regulations. In hot weather it had to be kept in an ice box.

Mrs. Volume said she had seen milk standing uncovered on a store counter, and did not think it was right.

Dr. Marcelle, chairman, said the dealer should be given warning, and if he repeated the offence his license should be taken away.

Sanitary Inspector Sleeth reported that during the past two weeks he had inspected fourteen houses for scarlet fever. He had received a complaint that an old man living on Division street had recently had a stroke, and that his family were not properly caring for him. The members decided that this was a case of neglect, and that the Board of Health had nothing to do with it.

A petition was received from residents of Rideau street asking that a license be not granted to M. Rosen who kept a second-hand and junk place down there. The petitioners claimed it was a nuisance. No license had been issued by the board. This matter will be further dealt with.

Mrs. Volume asked what redress there was for residents whose neighbors kept cows and calves which were a nuisance. There was a by-law against the keeping of pigs, but calves were regarded as great a nuisance when close to one's place of residence. A resolution was passed asking the city clerk to consult with the city solicitor and secure a report as to what regulation the board could pass with respect to cows, calves and horses.
