SPORTING NOTES.

Tommy Burns, former heavy-weight champion, proclaims Roland Todd the greatest defensive boxer of the day, the equal of Jack Johnson at his best. Todd went 20 rounds with Ted Kid Lewis and lost the decision because he was always hampered on the other all night.

Major Arnold Wilson, the prize fight entrepreneur, the Tex Richard of London, is trying to arrange another tumble for Joe Becker. Wilson aims to get Carpenter for Horizontal Joe as soon as Carpenter's broken ribs get better.

Boston has a bunch of swimmers called the "Brownies" who do a Brodie in the ocean every day in the year, no matter what the temperature may be.

The offer from Mexico to stage a Jess Willard-Floyd Johnson bout looks like an opportunity for the ex-heavyweight champion to try himself out.

Frank Moran, the veteran heavy-weight, will show his work to the Parisians in a bout with Young Nilles on Dec. 30th.

Christy Mathewson pitched two no-hit games—one against St. Louis in 1901 and the other against Chicago in 1905.

President Ban Johnson has aroused the ire of Gotham scribes by changing an error in the score of a game in New York to a hit for Ty Cobb.

The greatest distance Annette Kellerman ever swam was 23 miles, which she covered in 8 hours 11 minutes.

The smallest odds ever offered on a horse race were probably those of 1 to 100 on Man O' War on several occasions.

NEW PUNCH, KNOWN AS "PASSUS," IS USED BY JOHNNY CURTIN

The latest blow to be used in the ring is the "passus" punch. The name was coined from the Latin, meaning to skip around and it certainly does. Irish Johnny Curtin, new bantamweight sensation of that division, used it successfully the other night at Madison Square Garden, when he knocked out the much heralded Pee Wee Kaiser in less than two rounds.

It promises to go down in ring history with Kid McCoy's famous "corkscrew," Battling Nelson's "scissors," John L. Sullivan's "roundhouse," Bob Fitzsimmons' deadly "solar plexus," Billy Payke's wild "loop-the-loop" and others. The Jersey City idol collaborated with Dr. Joe Bier, who has been well known in the boxing fraternity for years, in perfecting the deadly smite. Doc did the thinking and Johnny puts the theory into operation.

The new blow, which is really a double-action one, consists of a sharp left hook to a certain spot on the body which then follows through with lightning-like speed to the jaw. It is well known that a hard blow to the pit of the stomach causes a dilatation of the blood vessels thereabouts, which in turn causes the blood to rush from the head. Between the time Curtin lands the blow to the body, on a spot which he does not divulge, and then whips to the jaw with the same fist, this action on the system takes place. No matter how fast Curtin fist completes the blow nature is just a bit speedier and when the impact finishes up on the jaw the brain is not normal because of the diversion of its usual supply of life's fluid elsewhere in the body. The result is that the brain cannot withstand the shock and the boxer on the receiving end becomes unconscious and is counted out.

Danny Frush, the Beckett of the Featherweights, is in London, right in line for a bout with Eugene Criqui, the European feather champion, who recently knocked out Billy Mathews, the British champion.
