A BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR LOCOMOTIVE CO.

The Toronto Globe's Financial Man Writes About the Prospects.

Recent reports of new business looked by the Canadian Locomotive Company has aroused interest in the company's stock, and much favorable comment is heard regarding the company's position and prospects. The first order in a year and a half or more has just been closed, which provides for the construction of 26 locomotives for the Canadian National Railways. There is a confident feeling among interests close to the company that this order is but the precursor of many others in the next few years. A statistical analysis of locomotive requirements in Canada indicate that some 5,000 or more locomotives are employed by the Canadian railroads. The mortality rate among locomotives has been figured out at about 5 per cent. per annum. At this rate some 250 locomotives are annually available for the scrap heap, but during the period of readjustment following the war, when railroads as well as other concerns were conserving their resources to the limit, there has been comparatively little replacement of worn equipment, as indicated by the fact that the Canadian Locomotive works at Kingston have been shut down for a year and a half or more. As a result of the extreme pressure placed upon railroad equipment last season in the handling of the grain crop, in addition to the wear and tear over the past two or three years without adequate renewals, it is felt that the railway companies will require replacement at considerably more than 250 locomotives per annum within the next two or three years at least in order to bring their equipment to a high state of efficiency.

The company has been conservatively managed, the profits made during wartime were accumulated, and have enabled the directors to maintain the regular dividend on its preferred and a rate of 4 per cent. on the common. The common dividend was only reduced from 8 to 4 per cent. during 1922. The stock is in demand at the present time, but very little is offering. The preferred is quoted 90 to 90 1/2 and common around 67.

HOLINESS MOVEMENT.

Evangelistic Services on Sunday—Superintendent Warren Preaches

The evangelistic services, which are being conducted by the Holiness Movement-church of this city, were continued on Sunday, with three services during the day. Rev. A. T. Warren, superintendent of this district, occupied the pulpit, and was assisted by Pastor E. R. Russell.

The Sunday devotional exercises marked the close of the first week of the special evangelistic convention which will continue through next week. The daily services have attracted good congregations, and a number of visitors from other churches of the denomination in the district have come into the city for the special week.

The feature of Sunday's programme was an address delivered by Mrs. M. J. Irwin, who has recently returned from China. She gave a brief outline of the work accomplished by her church in that distant country, and made a stirring appeal for support of the movement. Men, women and money were all needed. A short address was also given by Rev. J. W. Campbell, Sydenham. Miss Cora Warner rendered several solos.

Hens Are Dying.

It was reported on Monday that many local hen fanciers have lost some valuable birds during the past week or ten days. One man stated that eight birds had taken sick and died before he could do anything for them, while another man is reported to have lost his whole flock.

CHRIST'S COMING TO SET THE WORLD RIGHT

Christobel Pankhurst Speaks at First Baptist Church on Sunday Afternoon.

Miss Christobel Pankhurst, formerly the famous suffragette in England where she and her mother, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, were leaders in the great agitation that eventually led to the enfranchisement of women, was the special speaker in the First Baptist church on Sunday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. J. S. LaFlair, who introduced Miss Pankhurst, and announced that she would be the speaker at services to be held in the church on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Taking for her subject, "Christ's Second Coming," as foretold in the old and new testaments, Miss Pankhurst directed attention to the conditions of the world today and declared that the world was constantly growing worse. "It is beyond man's power to make the world right, only God can do it," said she. Referring to the "end of the world," so often spoken of, the speaker said that there would be an end, not in the sense in which that term was generally understood, but an "end of man's management of the world which would take place when Christ came the second time as ruler."

The higher critics of the Bible and of religion were strongly condemned by Miss Pankhurst. She termed their criticism "lower criticism," because it was based upon the scholarship of the eighteenth century, which has been shown by present day scholarship to be full of error. "For instance, knowledge that was held as truth in the eighteenth century is today found by modern scientific discovery to have been erroneous. The latest work of the archaeologists, inspired by the Bible, proves the historical accuracy of the Book. The things that are happening in the world today are the fulfillment of the prophecies which do not tell us that the world will get better, but that man's work will go down and be restored by God."

"The discoveries in science, and the inventions of genius are not man's work, but are due to supernatural inspiration. God discovers the way always, and enables man to reach the conclusions he seeks."

The speaker saw in the great world struggle of the late war the fulfillment of prophecy, and in conclusion of the war, the beginning of sorrows that now afflict humanity in many parts of the world. She pointed to the crisis in the Near-East as due to man's failure and declared that Christ was coming back to reign in the world and succeed where man failed.

MANIFESTATION OF CHRIST

Sermon in St. George's Cathedral by the Bishop of Ontario.

The Bishop of Ontario, who was the preacher in St. George's cathedral on Sunday morning, spoke on the Epiphany, or the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles. His text was St. John xiv, 22: "Lord, how is it that Thou wilt manifest Thyself to us and not unto the world?"

The first followers of Christ had hoped for the re-establishment of the kingdom of Israel. They had looked for the manifestation of worldly power, but it was a kingdom of love that Christ had come to found. His desire was to rule over the hearts of man and by them to establish His kingdom upon earth. His answer was that the disciples were to manifest His kingdom in their lives. "If a man love Me he will do My works; and My Father will love him and We will come unto him, and make our abode with him." That was the ideal discipleship in individual lives.

During the late war, and indeed today, men, and not only unbelievers, but humble followers of Christ, ask the question, "Why does not God manifest His power and end all this strife and misery?" If we think a moment we will remember that one of our Lord's temptations in the wilderness was just that, to accept "the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them," by turning aside from His purpose and avoiding the way of the cross.

But a great demonstration of His power was not God's way of establishing His kingdom on earth; it was to come slowly, love working all the time like the leaven in the parable, turning men's hearts to their heavenly Father; unostentatiously—"the kingdom of God cometh not with observation." The sincere and whole-hearted devotion of the early disciples was the driving force which won in a few years, a place as one of the world's religions for the faith in the crucified Nazarene, but worldliness crept in and now we are faced by the worst enemy to true religion, a nominal Christianity. "That is absolutely no good," said the bishop. "Unless a man's heart has been turned to Christ, unless his faith is the most vital thing in his life, he will never by his discipleship manifest Christ to the world."

Three Minute Journeys

Where Pilgrims Crawl, on Their Knees For Strength.

In 1265, at the Chateau of Kermartin, Brittany, was born St. Ives, whose name and tomb are revered by many in the most picturesque and strangest fashion.

St. Ives was an ecclesiastical lawyer. It was for this reason he was made the patron saint of lawyers. This good man was also the devoted friend of the poor and needy. His name has been many times blessed for his great kindness and generosity to those in poverty.

At Treguer, in Brittany, his skull is kept in a golden shrine, but his tomb is outside of the church at Minihy, a neighboring village.

Brittany is famed for her religious festivals. This province has kept alive all of her traditions and customs since the dawn of Christianity. They have come down to the present day with little change.

Through the Arch They Go.

To the traveler, there could be no more delightful time to visit Brittany than when the festival, known as "Pardons," takes place at Minihy. The town is crowded. The streets are filled with people from far and near, who are making a pilgrimage to the tomb of St. Ives Helouary.

They all go to the churchyard where this simple tomb without inscription is the object of their pilgrimage.

Here they wait in line—rich and poor, old and young, aristocrats and peasants—each with some hope in his or her heart, firmly believing it will be realized on this day of "Pardons."

They believe that if they crawl through the arch of this tomb on their hands and knees they will gain strength from the contact with the ground where the saint lies buried. Through the arch they go—the picturesque peasants, women in their white flowing caps, men in the jaunty jackets, smart people from the cities, and swaggering soldiers brush against a fisherman fresh from the sea or a smug provincial merchant. They arise from the earth with mud on their faces, but with the light of hope in their eyes and comfort and inspiration in their souls.

GANANOQUE

Jan. 15.—An important meeting is to be held in the Lyceum this evening at 8.15, under the auspices of the Daughters of the Empire. Efforts are being made to get the school authorities in about thirty schools to combine, and employ a specially trained nurse, who will make regular visits to the schools for the purpose of dental and medical inspection. Two specialists from the department of education, Toronto, will be present to address the meeting, using slides to illustrate their views.

Gananogue Canoe Club members hold their annual mid-winter gathering in the Canoe Club Wednesday evening. Miss Nellie Nolan, Rochester, N.Y., is in town, called home by the serious illness of her mother, Main street.

Miss Lena Sullivan, who has been in Ottawa for a few days, has returned to Gananogue, and will remain here a few days longer before returning to Windsor.

Mrs. Bradley and daughter, Prescott, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Delaney for a few days.

Mrs. John Murphy, Gananogue Junction, died Saturday. John Kane, Brewer's Mills, also passed away.

C. E. Britton, who has been in Perth for the past several weeks, is spending a few days in town.

The Badminton Club had a very pleasant afternoon tea at the armories this afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Skinner, who have been in New York for the motor show arrived home today. They also attended the winter carnival in Montreal en route. Miss Betty Sampson has returned to Trafalgar, Montreal, to resume her studies.

At Sydenham Street Church, Rev. Dr. Falls, steward of the Methodist Book Room, Toronto, was the special preacher at Sydenham street Methodist church at both services on Sunday. Dr. Falls was a very busy man during the day and spoke at no less than four services. On Sunday afternoon he addressed the young men's class, and after the evening service he gave a short talk at the students' gathering.

At the evening service he spoke about the Christian Guardian, the official paper of the Methodist church. He said that the cost of the paper, which went into one issue of the Christian Guardian, cost $1.71 per year, and yet the paper was sold at $2.

Fifteen Inches of Snow. Fully fifteen inches of snow has fallen in Kingston during the past week. In the up-town section of the city the snow is so deep that people appear to be travelling in trenches. If a mild spell comes there will be floods in certain sections.

The Canadian National railway headquarters, Moncton, N.B., announce that no passenger trains are running on account of snow drifts. A man whose only motive for action is his wages, does a bad piece of work.
