Those were great victories over nature, but they did not make people feel really safe. Clubs, pointed sticks, and slings were good weapons against small animals, but did not help much against larger beasts.

Among the fierce animal enemies times three feet long. of men in Europe and elsewhere was the saber-tooth tiger. You see it

We get an idea of how this tiger looked from bones it has left. Notice the long, sharp teeth. Thosa teeth are as keen as the blade of a saber. That is where the name "saber-tooth" comes from.

During thousands of years, men in Europe were bothered by this tiger. If it sprang at them, they were almost certainly lost.

Happily, saber-tooth tigers did not like cold weather. When the climate This is really excep- of Europe began to grow cooler and cooler, some of them died off. Others made their way to Africa by the strips of land which then joined Furope to Africa.

Hays, secretary-treasurer of the Inernational, in a membership communication inspired by the approach of the seventy-first anniversary of the founding of the organization.

"It is significant to recall that the first president of the New York Typographical Union, one of the local organizations which played a part in founding the national association, was Horace Greeley, editor and publisher of the New York Tribune. says the communication. Greeley, himself a skilled printer, belonged to the large body of pub-Hishers which has always believed that well treated and contented employees were worth the price of their independence from economic

"Throughout the years of its existence the typographical union has seen comparatively little bitterness even in its greatest struggles. While strikes and other forms of strife have not been absent, in a majority of newspaper offices union members and the managements have enjoyed cordial relationships most of the time. No doubt this is due in part to better understanding on each side of problems confronting the other Publishers from the nature of their calling develop broader knowledge of human problems and are less apt to feel hatred in a clashing of interests than are men of narrower experiences. Something of the same attitude is to be found in printers whose work is also conductive of thoughtful habits of mind. The result is seen in the generally prosperous condition of newspapers and the relative contentment of employees

"Efforts to advance an open shop movement at this time are regrettable chiefly because they add to the turmoil and unrest of the public mind. Wise thought and sound poli- Cook's Cotton Root Compound cies along class welfare lines are scarcely to be expected to develop among a people beset by a vast variety of social problems. The American Plan represents radical Bourbonism in the same sense that the Workers' Party represents radical communism. Both movements derive much of their motive power from the same agencies. It has but recently been revealed that the importance of the radical communistic movement in this country has been grossly exaggerated by sleuths and propagandists bent on enriching themselves through frightening employers and capitalists. The same types, and in some cases no doubt the same individuals, carry on the 'open shop' movement-professional propagandists, contribution solicitors and speakers.

"The large employer of labor is often easy to viotimize. His multitude of special business cares preclude thoughtful consideration of propositions presented by promoters of movements. He has usually an annual appropriation to spend on 'policy.' The promoter enjoys that

"From a strictly cynical viewpoint it can be seen that an employer has little to gain from the 'open shop' movement. In the first place workers are not likely to allow their highly beneficial trade unions to be wrested from them. But even supposing the movement, at great cost should drive unionism to the wall. What then? Would the men who had known the advantages and independence of collective bargaining and philanthropic provisions of unionism docilely accept a state of ju-Nears Seventy-First Anniver- venile dependence on employers, or worse, descend to serfdom as would be the case in some shops?
