SEASONABLE WORK IN THE GARDEN

How To Make Money Growing and Selling Peonies

(All rights reserved in U.S., Canada and British Isles by T. Sheward.)

The Peonies of our gardens are divided into two groups, the Tree Peonies, (Paeonia Moutan,) and the herbaceous sorts. It is these herbaceous sorts that are chiefly grown by Peony specialists who purchase roots of sorts that sell well and increase their number by division every two years when the surplus roots are sold.

There is a good profit to be made in the careful culture of peonies even exclusive of the sale of tree flowers which are worth a dollar per dozen in most districts. There are many instances of very large profits made by growers under favorable circumstances of location and otherwise; one man of whom the writer knows planted Peonies on two lots in the suburbs of a city where he had plenty of water available; the flowers alone paid for the planting and cultivation and when the roots were divided at the end of the second year the revenue which they brought was sufficient to pay for the lots and the grower still had enough roots for the next season. Another specialist purchased fifty dollars worth of roots of the very best named sorts and a few years afterwards was selling a thousand dollars worth of roots each season. Many Peony growers have started by growing just a few roots as a hobby; then as their stock increased they sold to neighbors and finally the hobby grows into a very profitable business.

How To Grow Peonies

Peonies are easy to grow. They do not grow well in heavily manured soil but it must be fertile. Land which has been heavily manured the previous year for some other crop will generally do well, but it is well that the fertility of the soil should have been attained over a period of several years of healthful cultivation. The roots are divided into pieces having eyes as shown at fig. 1, and are planted in rows two feet apart, the roots being set on a slant so that as the earth settles the roots will fit it; the correct method of planting is shown at fig. 12. If planted perpendicularly as at fig. 10, there is a danger that as the soil settles the roots will not go with it, the bud will be exposed as at fig. 11, and suffer winter gilling.

After planting the roots are kept well cultivated until the end of the second year when they are taken up and divided into pieces, each having from three to five eyes, as shown at fig. 1, and sold. Small pieces, as shown at fig. 4, having no eyes, are thrown into a pit or planted thickly in rows to be sorted over later on and those which form eyes are replanted. A piece of root like that shown at fig. 5, is not worth planting because the lower part cannot make an eye.

A very quick way of propagating Peonies was discovered about three years ago; it was found that covering the plants with about eighteen inches of fine soil early in Spring, as shown at fig. 13, causes a large number of buds to form on the stems and these are cut away as at fig. 2, and planted separately as at fig. 6. By this method it is possible to raise thirty or even forty new plants each year from one root.

Raising Peonies from seed is also very interesting. Seeds should be saved from the very best sorts only and planted at once for if they are allowed to become dry it takes two years for them to germinate. Sow the seeds in drills as shown at fig. 7, and, after one season, if they are growing thickly in the row, (fig. 8.) they can be transplanted as at fig. 9. When flowering time comes along you may find a new variety of blossom and new sorts of merit are worth quite a lot of money.

The Tree Peonies are grafted onto the roots of the herbaceous sorts, the split-graft method, (fig. 14), or the side graft, (fig. 3), being used to good advantage. Stock and cion are fitted together and tied with fine wire and stored away in fine moss or sand until planting time in Spring. In making the cion a strong short shoot, destitute of flower buds, is chosen and prepared for joining onto the piece of root as shown at fig. 3.

JEFFERSON COUNTY MEN ARE HANGED AT KINGSTON

L. N. Fuller's Article on Patriot Leaders Who Paid Penalty on Scaffold.

L. N. Fuller has another copyright article in the Watertown, N.Y., Times regarding the Patriots, in which reference is made to the Jefferson county men who were hanged at Kingston. The article follows:

When the Patriots arrived in Kingston they were tied together with ropes, and with Von Schoultz at the head they were paraded through the streets, subjected to jeers and insults from the crowds. Von Schoultz was struck with a club during this march. The wounded were sent to the hospital and the others were placed in the prison of Fort Henry.

On Monday the sheriff informed the men that one in each room would be allowed to write to friends. Captain Heuis wrote to Bernard Bagley of Watertown informing him of their condition, and telling him of the need of clothing and money. In a few days Mr. Bagley sent $300 which had been collected from friends and at various times other amounts were sent, amounting in all to about $700. John Fine of Ogdensburg, accompanied by Charles G. Myers, went to Kingston and after considerable difficulty managed to see the prisoners, but not until the colonel in command took the responsibility for letting the prisoners be seen.

The prisoners were supplied with

LIVER TROUBLE

Pains in Stomach

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arise from disorders of the liver, stomach or bowels.

If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, sour stomach, bilious spells, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, water brash, etc., you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They will live up to the liver, regulate the bowels, and tone up the stomach.

Mr. T. C. Hallman, Highgate, Ont., writes: "I have had liver trouble and pains in the stomach for a long time. I started to use your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and in a short time I noticed they were helping me. Now I would not be without them and cannot recommend them too highly."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

food through a contractor and at first much of it was unfit to eat, especially the bread. The prisoners submitted a sample of it to the commandant of the fort and better fare was thereafter provided. After a few days Colonel Van Schoultz was brought before a court-martial. He admitted his guilt and declared that he was fighting in the cause of liberty. His trial was a farce and he was condemned to death. The officers of the 83rd British regulars who witnessed his heroism on the field of battle, implored the governor of Upper Canada to spare his life, but it was useless. Von Schoultz met his fate with the same quiet heroism that had marked all his actions.

Four days after the execution of Von Schoultz, Colonel Abbey of Pamela and Daniel George of Lyme were led to the scaffold. A few days later Colonel Woodruff of Onondaga county suffered a similar fate. On Dec. 22nd, Joel Peeler, of Rutland and Sylvanus Sweet, of Alexandria were marched to the gallows. Peeler, a farmer of Rutland, left a widow and six children with no means of support. On Jan. 4th, Christopher Buckler, of Onondaga county, Sylvester Lawton, of Lyme, Russell Phelps, of Lyme and Duncan Anderson, of Lyme, paid the extreme penalty. Anderson was so ill that he had to be carried to the gallows. On Feb. 11th Leman Leach, of Onondaga county was hanged.

The other prisoners felt that each day was to be the last. The Canadian governor was determined on a policy of blood and iron and nothing would stay his hand. An endeavor was made to have the minors of the prisoners pardoned. The trials were in military court and through the intercession of Judge Jones of the queen's bench, a pardon was granted to six of the boys, providing they would use their influence to prevent further aggressions. From time to time others among the minors were released until all were allowed to return home. At various times between December and May others were pardoned or released without trial until there were but sixty left in captivity.

July 4th found the Patriots still in prison. They managed to make a flag out of some handkerchiefs and this rude banner of their own country they hung on the walls of the bastle. Some lemonade was made and in it were drunk toasts to liberty and the spirit of '76. Numerous meetings were held throughout Jefferson county. The result of the Prescott affair had been a decided change in sentiment in Northern New York toward these border raids. Public sympathy turned sharply against that section of Canada which was seeking to overthrow the British rule. The change was marked by the tone of the resolutions which were passed in which any attempts to disturb the friendly relations existing between the United States and Canada were deplored. The resolutions expressed sympathy for the prisoners who were held at Kingston and money was raised for their relief, but their acts were termed those of folly and rashness.

Despite the testimony of some who wrote their experiences during the Patriot war, the treatment of the prisoners at Kingston was humane and fair. The Jeffersonian published a letter written by Martin Van-Syke after he had been pardoned in which he said that there was no complaint as to treatment that had been received. In this letter he urged his friends to abstain from any further acts of war. Colonel

Van Schoultz in a letter written just before his death said that he had been grossly deceived, that there was no evidence of British misrule in Canada and that they were a happy and contented people. An interesting item appeared in the Jeffersonian in February, 1839, stating that the Ellis painting, of "The Surrender of the Patriots at Windmill Point" would be exhibited at the American hotel for 25 cents admittance.

In September, 1839, the prisoners remaining at Fort Henry were told that they were to be removed. They were shackled together and were transported by boat to Quebec where they were taken on board the ship Buffalo. There were on board a total of 141 prisoners who had been taken in various skirmishes and on the morning of Sept. 29th the ship started under sealed orders. They were soon out on the broad Atlantic and then it became known that their destination was that dreaded penal settlement of Great Britain, Van Dieman's land. An attempt was made to mutiny and seize the boat but the plot was betrayed and more strict measures were taken to secure the prisoners, they being confined below decks several days. It was not until Feb. 14th, 1840, that the destination was reached, a voyage of 140 days from Quebec.

It was a sad experience for these Jefferson county men who were firm in their belief that never again would they see their homes. They had been sentenced to death on the gallows, but the sentence had been commuted to a living death, banishment for life in that most dreaded penal colony in the world. Many tales had come to them of the cruelties that were practised by the British government in treating those who were so unfortunate as to be sent to this penal colony.
