Kingston Markets

Friday, April 27th.
Local dealers state that prices on sugar will advance within a few days as soon as the present stock is exhausted, the wholesale quotations having been advanced slightly. Whey butter has disappeared from the market. Maple syrup is more plentiful and is slightly down. Other prices remain about the same.

HOW TO AVOID RICKETS

A Nutritional Disease Affecting Young Animals.

Sometimes Called "Bullnose" and "Snuffles"—Caused Largely by Unfavorable Conditions—Prevention and Treatment—Get Rid of Chronic Runts.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)
The occurrence of this disease in young animals seems to be largely caused by unfavorable conditions of life, inducing impaired nutrition of the body. In particular there appears to be a lack of bone development, due to a deficiency of lime salts and other bone-forming elements in the body. Lack of exercise and close confinement in damp quarters are predisposing influences and are a cause of the disease occasionally in foals and calves.

In pigs the disease occurs generally soon after weaning time and particularly in litters born during the late fall and winter months. At this time, improper feeding of the young pigs associated with exposure to inclement weather and close confinement in cold damp quarters combine in accentuating the tendency towards faulty nutrition and ill-health, which are forerunners of Rickets. The feeding of young pigs excessively on corn and also keeping them exclusively on a starchy diet of buttermilk in at times responsible. In some cases there appears to be an inherited tendency in litters, due possibly to errors in the management and feeding of the sow while pregnant, and after farrowing.

Symptoms.
In the case of calves and colts becoming affected with Rickets, they appear unthrifty and develop imperceptibly. The bones of the legs become softened so that they gradually bend and become distorted, causing the animal to be bow-legged and enlarged at the joints, and otherwise unsightly shaped. They are prone to lie down a great deal of the time, and in walking they move stiffly. In the case of calves and colts becoming affected with Rickets, they appear unthrifty and develop imperceptibly. The bones of the legs become softened so that they gradually bend and become distorted, causing the animal to be bow-legged and enlarged at the joints, and otherwise unsightly shaped. They are prone to lie down a great deal of the time, and in walking they move stiffly. In some cases, young pigs frequently become affected and, at first, appear to thrive poorly and have an abnormal appetite. This causes in them a craving for dirt and to keep picking up and chewing pieces of stick and bones. They soon begin to develop abnormally and distorted growth, while remaining stunted in growth. They become pot bellied and the head enlarges, giving it a bulging appearance. The name "Bullnose" being used. They may also breathe with a snuffing sound, while the head remains large. The skin often becomes thickened and cracked and gets discolored with dirt, giving a black sooty appearance to white pigs. Sooner or later, the bones of the legs begin to bend and they become deformed. This causes the legs to become badly bowed and makes them walk very stiff and awkward. The joints become enlarged and the pigs lie down a great deal of the time and, on rising, they keep resting on their knees. The lower ends of the ribs also become enlarged and seem to bend inwardly under the body. At times many of the rickety pigs become troubled with piles and prolapse of the rectum, causing it to protrude as a red tumor-like mass behind. Finally they become miserably wasted and thin and remain worthless stunted mortals of no value.

Prevention and Treatment.
To prevent the occurrence of Rickets, one of the chief essentials is maintaining a proper mode of living for the mother while pregnant and for the young during early life. This entails rational dieting according to their needs, combined with comfortable living quarters and a reasonable amount of regular exercise and outdoor life in fine weather. In the case of colts being raised artificially on cows' milk, it should be diluted with about one-third water and sweetened with a little sugar. In the case of pigs they must receive suitable diet after being weaned. They should not be fed exclusively on dry corn, nor on chopped oats composed largely of the hulls, nor entirely on buttermilk. In winter, young pigs should be given a clean, dry, warm, place to sleep in and the bedding should be changed daily. This is particularly essential in the case of late fall and winter litters. The diet should be suitably balanced and consist of a mixture of ground oats free from hulls, corn meal, ground barley and shorts with a little salt, chalk and charcoal added from time to time. The feed should be given mixed with milk or water as a thick slop. A little ground oil cake or bone meal and skim milk is also good. As the pigs increase in size the diet can be gradually changed. They should be allowed plenty of range and pasture in summer. When young pigs are noticed showing a tendency of developing Rickets, the progress of the disease can often be arrested and a complete recovery obtained, if taken in time, by changing and supplementing their diet with tonics. The diet should be arranged as already described, with the addition of some digester—(tankage and bone meal. To the drink can be added lime water and to the feed a tonic composed of sulphate of iron one part, bicarbonate of soda and charcoal four parts. These ingredients are mixed thoroughly together and a spoonful of the mixture added to the feed allowance of each pig once or twice a day. In cases of pronounced Rickets in pigs, where they become chronic runts, they are not worth treating and should be got rid of.—C. D. Mc Gillivray, Principal, Ontario Veterinary College, Guelph.

To Sell Bernhard's Books
Paris, April 28.—Sara Bernhard's books, pictures and furniture—the things she loved, many of them given her by notables—are soon to be sold at public auction. Her library contains a number of beautifully bound works, some with autograph dedications, by Dumas Fils, Sardou, Roostand and others in whose plays she starred.

The demand for go-carts appear to be so great that these wagons are being stolen off the streets. The occupants, however, are kindly left, being considered of little value.

What is the matter with the Badlington devotees that they are neglecting their play? This is a game that appears to be strenuous enough only to receive notice in the social columns.

Things have come to such a pass that even the Children's Aid society, which should be wholly supported by the provincial government and the municipalities, is asking for financial help. This society is doing a great work and should not have to pass the hat around. Let the municipality do its duty.

THE MAN ON WATCH

There is certainly no valid reason why women should not pay statute labor tax, unless it is just "because."

The Irish rector of St. Paul's is a popular man with other religious denominations in Kingston. He feels at home among the Presbyterians and more especially at the "Armagh schoolhouse" on Brock street, where he attended the other night to give a welcome to Cooke's new minister.

The new Cooke's minister has among his possessions a fine Jersey cow and therefore he cannot be numbered among the "drys."

The clerical hat has not been entirely discarded in Kingston. Some of the preachers still wear this "lid," which distinguishes them.

The sugar prices are soaring and the housewives are soaring. One war that the women all favor is one upon the sugar profiteers.

By the way if you want to see a good vaudeville performance you will find it at the Grand all next week.

Good citizens will at once clean up their premises and not allow their old paper to blow all over their neighbors' lawns.

With Dr. Austin and his St. George's society on guard there will be no chance for Bolshevist teachings in Kingston. There will no doubt now be a big run on roast beef, which should assume popularity, even in boarding houses.

The mayor of Kingston is an Englishman, but it is told of him that he did not know that Monday last, the 23rd of April, was St. George's day and asked why the flags were flying on the city hall. Oh, Thomas man!

Barrett Everlastic Giant Shingles
Lay Them Right Over the Old Roof

These sturdy shingles are made and laid 3 to a strip. Thanks to their extra weight, thickness, and rigidity, they can be laid right over the old roof. (Use 1 1/2" galvanized roofing nails). This means big savings in money, labor and trouble.

You can rely on these shingles to stand staunch and tight against storm and blizzard throughout the years. Their base is of extra-heavy, best grade roofing-felt, saturated with high grade waterproofing material.

These "Giants" for service are strikingly handsome. Their surface is of everlasting mineral in artistic shades of red, green or blue-black. Because of this mineral surface they are highly fire-resistant—never need painting or staining.

Come in. See these modern roofings. Get our estimate on a complete roof of Barrett Everlastic Giant Shingles. Prices are extremely moderate.
