She Wanted an Amethyst Room

BUT HER CARPET WAS FAWN, SO—

She is a Toronto lady with a genius for creating artistic effects in her rooms. She couldn't afford a new rug, so she sent us the old one to be dyed, with a sample of the desired shade.

The result was perfect. Our customer was overjoyed. And today her room with amethyst rug and hangings and harmonizing chintz is the loveliest in the whole house.

PRINCESS MARY'S MESSAGE TO THE GIRL GUIDES

Princess Mary, Viscountess Lascelles, president of the Girl Guides throughout the Empire, has sent the following message to the Girl Guides of Canada, through Lady Baden-Powell, Chief Guide:

"As President of the Girl Guides, I am deeply interested in the growth of the Guide Movement throughout Canada, and I am exceedingly glad that the girls of the Dominion are taking their share in the sisterhood which has spread throughout the whole Empire.

"To all I send my best wishes, and may they have great success and much happiness both in their own lives and in the work they are able to do for others.

(Signed) Mary,"

The Chief Commissioner for Canada, Mrs. H. D. Warren, has cabled the following acknowledgement to the Princess' lady-in-waiting:

"The Princess Mary's gracious message delivered by Lady Baden-Powell, deeply appreciated by Canadian Girl Guides, who return loyal and affectionate greetings."

Gardening.

With the early spring days the garden comes in for a good deal of attention. Gloves and sunbonnets are donned and with rake and hoe in hand the beds are carefully cultivated and seeds sown which later in the season are expected to yield choice vegetables and flowers. What a pleasure it is during these bright, sunny spring mornings to plant and prepare for the coming summer, when the birds sing in the trees about us, and all nature appears to be glad that the winter has disappeared.

Would it not be well to pay a little attention to the garden of the heart? Out of it are the issues of life and so much can be done to make a decided improvement in ourselves and our surroundings. Some seem to think that cheerfulness, brightness and a happy, contented mind are largely matters of temperament, and those persons possessing such qualities are frequently envied by their less fortunate friends. It's a mistake to suppose that these are always native to the individual. They are very often acquired by cultivation and can be had by anyone who will take the trouble to do a little heart-gardening. On these bright days we should all see the bright side of life.

WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

The Godfrey Women's Institute held its annual meeting at the home of Mrs. William Clarke's on April 30th, with a good attendance of ladies. The meeting opened with ode followed by the Lord's prayer. Several important discussions took place, namely: Planning for exhibit at the Kingston fall fair, household remedies and church activities. After settling the business for the year, the election of officers took place. Mrs. R. A. Hamilton was re-elected president and Mrs. William Clark was elected secretary-treasurer; Miss Margaret Howes, vice-president; Mrs. C. G. McKnight, director. Miss Maggie Leslie and Miss Margaret Howes are to phone every member the day before each monthly meeting. The Institute is to meet at Miss Gertrude Beatty's the last Tuesday in May.

The "Latest Wrinkle" in Fancy Work.

I am aware that many of my Housekeeper Readers make fancy work articles to sell through woman's exchanges in order to earn "pin money." So, for their sake, I make a practice of going around to the various fancy work stores, whenever I make a flying trip to a city which abounds in such shops, for the purpose of gleaming the "latest wrinkle" in fancy work ideas. Here are some new wrinkles which I ran across this week:

The New Pin Trays: This idea came from Paris. The tray itself is of glass, measuring about three inches across the top. Its shape is very low with curved sides, similar to the saucer of a small after-dinner coffee cup. (Any kind of glass tray could be used.) The entire under side of the tray is covered with gold net, which lies tightly drawn across the bottom and is gathered around the rim of the tray so that it will cling to the sides. Of course the gold net shows through the glass when one looks down on the tray. Directly in the middle of the tray, on the bottom (lying between the gold net and the under side of the tray) is a tiny dolly of white linen with a butterfly or a flower embroidered on it; this decoration, showing through the glass, gives a very dainty effect.

The New Vases: These were simply the tall, slender white and tinted glass vases (such as one can buy at a five-and-ten-cent store) flaring at the top, but they were decorated by being covered with old-rose or old blue silk brocade at the bottom, extending half way up the height of the vase. Gold braid was run around (that is, at the extreme bottom and half way up). In this way a case may be made to harmonize with a bedroom color scheme—for, of course, cretonne, or any material or color, may be used in place of the pink or blue brocade silk.

Glass Basket Pin Cushions: Once more the popular tinted glassware was used for a bedroom article. The inside of the basket was stuffed with cotton (wool is better) and this stuffing covered with old-rose silk brocade; gold braid was run around the edges of the basket to cover the raw edges of the brocade. The under side of the glass basket was covered with the brocade under gold net, and finished at the extreme bottom with gold braid. The glass handle of the basket was concealed with gold braid. Then pins with colored glass tops were stuck into the padded part of some pretty design as a finishing touch.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Kirkman in care of the "Efficient Housekeeping" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question. Be sure to use YOUR full name, street number, and the name of your city and province. —The Editor.

To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, MAY 8.

This day's planetary configurations promise important and sudden changes and benefits, which may be considered of a radical nature, coming as they may, like a bolt from the blue under the sextile of Sol to Uranus, the swift, sudden and unconventional. Advancement and promotion may be looked for, with the abrupt presentation of new projects and opportunities. In domestic and other affairs of a social or romantic nature, there may be disturbance. Be circumspect and cautious in all relations.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of unusual and unexpected advantage and opportunity. These may involve radical change of position or residence. In the domain of the heart and home, however, there may be need for wise discretion and fortitude.

What the Editor Hears

That Reginald Gibbs, the little boy who won the first prize in the British Whig guessing contest, is receiving congratulations not only for the $15 which he won, but for the ability which is his.

That the Catarqui Golf Clubhouse is undergoing repairs and is not yet available to the members for bridges and luncheons.

That Mrs. Henry P. Davidson, widow of the late partner of J. Pierpont Morgan, has established a trust fund to bring six English scholars—three from Oxford and three from Cambridge—to America each year for post-graduate work, in order to more closely establish Anglo-American friendship. The students will go to Yale, Princeton and Harvard.

That the Ontario Division of the Red Cross has taken full responsibility for the Cochrane Hospital, including the care and provisioning of the convalescents. This is a work

That the ready-to-wear frocks seen in the Kingston shops are most attractive, and are usually set at a price which gives the purchaser full value for her money.

That many people have relics which will be of interest to the members of the Ontario Historical Society, which will meet here in July, and should loan them to the Kingston Historical Society for the occasion.

Known to Canadian Golfers.

It is not generally known that Dr. O. P. Willing, of Portland, Ore., who lost only by a stroke to Francis Guimet in the final for the St. George's Challenge Cup on the Sandwich course in England, is well known to several Canadian golfers. He played over the Lambton course at Toronto a couple of years ago, and his play at that time drew much favorable comment. He was described as one of the longest hitters seen in Toronto, and he has rather a peculiar style. He plays with his feet almost together and has very little or no back-swing or follow
