TRAITOR NOW DEFIANT

DONDEMNED BY COURT ERNEST JUDET WILL FIGHT.

Famous French Journalist Promises Some Sensational Disclosures in the Near Future—He Has Always Been an Anglophobe and Believes That France Should Arrange Understanding With Germany.

There is a prospect that France is about to have a political trial whose reverberations will be heard round the world, for Ernest Judet has returned from Switzerland to face a trial for treason. His return has been voluntary, and this, added to the fact that for many years he was one of the best informed and most implacable newspaper editors in the country, with a particular passion for preserving every little document and letter that ever came into his hands, is taken as an indication that he has less to fear from the outcome than some of his enemies, among whom Clemenceau is the chief. Judet was one of the most prominent of the alleged traitors tried and condemned in France after the war. But in the meantime he had left for Switzerland, where he was informed of the fact that he had been sentenced to life imprisonment. The sentence was not so terrific as might appear, for M. Judet is now seventy-one years of age, and, nevertheless, he announced his intention of returning and having a new trial. It is obvious that he has little fear of another conviction.

Judet was for many years editor of the Reclair, and distinguished himself as a leader of the French School of Thought, which was in favor of an understanding with Germany rather than with Great Britain. He argued that if France and Germany could permanently settle their old enmity they might unite and share in world domination. Joseph Caillaux was also a spokesman for this school. There was nothing treasonable in such utterances at the time they were made, which was in the period that Delcasse and King Edward were founding the Entente, but made the nation was at war with Germany, naturally they were differently regarded. Judet was no doubt sincere in his anglophobia, which grew to be the main impulse of his career. At the time of the Panama scandals he accused Clemenceau of being the paid agent of the British Government, and sought to substantiate his charges by the production of letters alleged to have come from the British Embassy to Paris. Later these were shown to be dummy forgeries. But Clemenceau's vindication did not abate the rancour of Judet, who continued to pursue him, and in one of the bitterest elections in French history, succeeded in driving "the Tiger" into political exile which lasted for years.

In the crisis of the Great War, when Clemenceau came again to power, his immediate task was to restore the morale of the French people which had been undermined by German propaganda through the Parisian press. At this time there were dozens of Socialist dailies being published, which were mere political pamphlets. None of them could live on its sales or advertising receipts. They were the personal organs of some French politician, subsidized by camouflaged Germans, or mere black-mailing sheets. Many of them were defeated. They sluded the censorship by the use of clever innuendo, and kept urging that the war should be ended. They gave publicity to the fact that there had been mutinous disorders among more than one hundred French regiments in the field, these disorders, in their turn, having been largely due to the tone of the papers. Indeed, there seems to be little doubt that when Clemenceau became Premier, France was nearly on the verge of collapse, and a referendum might have shown the people almost equally divided as to whether the war should be fought to a finish or compromised. It is the final victory was due to Foch's leadership, it is plain that without Clemenceau, Foch would never have had the opportunity of crowning his leadership with triumph. Well has "the Tiger" been called "the Father of Victory."

As a lifelong journalist, Clemenceau was well qualified to deal with the Paris press, which was sapping the patriotism of the nation. There was a sudden swoop which netted Bolo Pasha, Durruti and a score of lesser lights. There were swift trials and summary executions. But Clemenceau was unable to reach others more highly placed whom he suspected, but against whom no positive evidence was forthcoming. Among them was Judet, but Judet, knowing that he could expect no particular consideration from his old enemy, declined to take a chance, and fled to Switzerland.

In his absence he was charged with having sold the influence of the Reclair to German interests, and was condemned and sentenced, as already related. In view of his record the sentence appears unjust. There was no need of Germany to have bought what it had already. Judet had always been favorable to Germany and hostile to Great Britain. He regarded the Entente as a mistake, and said so in a hundred burning articles long before the war. He believed that France and Germany should be friends, and was long on record to this effect. It is not beyond probability that German interests helped support a paper which was doing so much work for them. He has intimated that efforts were made to buy his paper, but hints that the overtures were made on behalf of members of Clemenceau's Government. To prove that he was guileless, he has announced that he will summon two hundred witnesses, among them being Clemenceau and others who held high positions in the war, whom he will endeavor to put on trial instead of himself.

Never permit the paintwork about a car to chip off, nor permit dirt and water to work their way into the material underneath. Paint protects the surface below it from the effects of moisture. This is particularly valuable on wheels, fenders and beneath the car.

CHILD-LOVERS END CENTURY-OLD FEUD.

A modern version of the Romeo and Juliet story was discovered in the announcement of the betrothal of six-year-old Maria Guicciardini to eight-year-old Antonio Lualdi, children of two Corsican families who have been involved in a century-old feud. In the course of that time thirty people have been killed in the quarrel. The two children met and loved one another so well that their parents have consented to their betrothal and a reconciliation has taken place.

THE GOVERNMENT LEADING.

Result of the Returns in Newfoundland Elections.
St. John's, Nfld., May 5.—The first day of the counting of votes in Thursday's general elections has ended with the advantage in favor of Sir Richard Squires. The government has captured seats in two former opposition districts and has lost one seat to the opposition. Out of eleven seats heard from the government has won seven. This represents a gain of one seat.

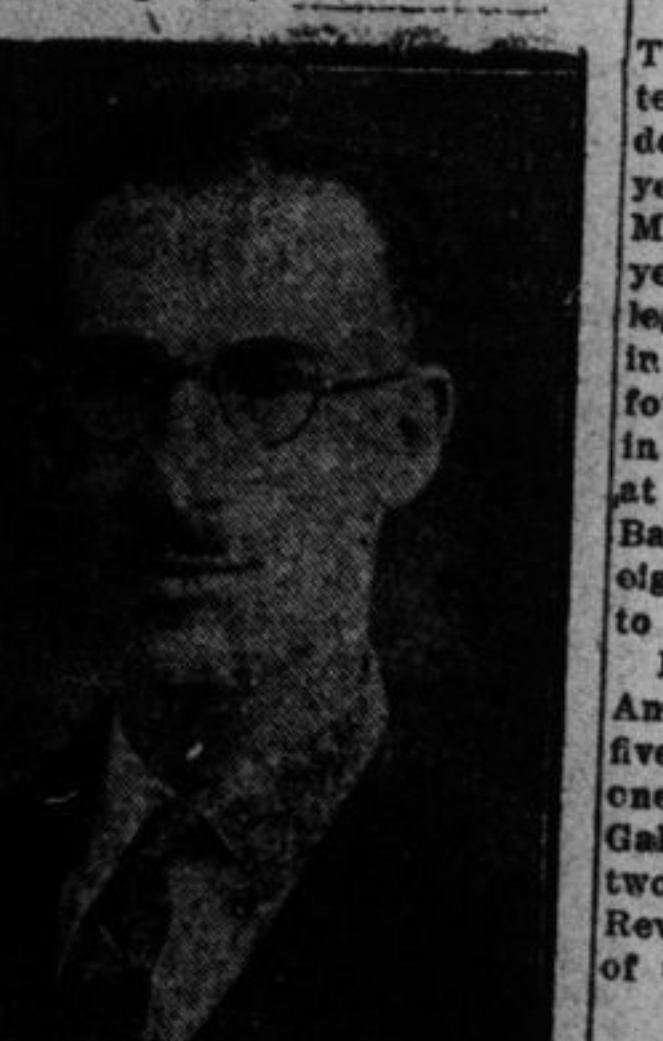

A Switchman Killed.

St. Thomas, May 5.—Albert Clements, yard switchman in the employment of the Pere Marquette railroad, was almost instantly killed last night when he stumbled and fell beneath the wheels of a moving train. His body was almost cut in two and he died before he could be removed to the hospital.

Feel Like My Old Self

Hamilton Salesman Gains Five Pounds and Feels Stronger in Every Way Since Taking DRECO. Friends Comment on His Improved Appearance—Speaks Highly of DRECO's Benefits.

No occupation calls for a greater degree of physical well-being than that of a salesman. Above all others, he must feel well and look well if he is to impress his customers favorably and make success of his business. How much, therefore, does his welfare depend on the proper functioning of the digestive organs?

MR. A. A. BOURN
Mr. A. A. Bourn, of 33 Charles Street, Hamilton, was in a general run-down condition until DRECO cured him of stomach, kidney and intestinal disorders that were rapidly impairing his earning power.

"For some time," says Mr. Bourn, "I have been feeling terribly weak and run down. I completely lost my appetite and whatever I did eat would form gas, causing me to belch and bloot in a distressing way. My kidneys were so bad that I could hardly stoop, what with the terrible pains across my back and I had to constantly take a bottle of DRECO, but I have gained five pounds in weight and am feeling stronger in every way. My bowels are regular, I eat well and sleep soundly. All my friends remark on how much better I am looking. It is a pleasure indeed to recommend DRECO, for I am delighted with the benefits it has given me."

There is no need for any man or woman to suffer the miseries of indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney trouble or a disordered liver. These, and all similar complaints, yield quickly to the natural toning and regulating influence of DRECO, the herb and root remedy that has won the heartfelt thanks and commendation of thousands of Canadians, many of them right in and around Hamilton.

DRECO is being specially introduced in Kingston by MAHOOD'S DRUG STORE, and is sold by a good druggist everywhere.

LARKIN TO MOVE OFFICES.

Canadian Headquarters May Be Transferred to Waterloo Place.
London, May 5.—May is the last month in which the Canadian High Commissioner, the Hon. P. C. Larkin, can stay in the present Canadian offices on Victoria street. The lease expires in June, and there is no desire to renew it.

Instead, negotiations are being expedited for the acquisitions of a handsome new building in Waterloo Place. The Grand hotel in Trafalgar Square was first recommended as a site for new Canadian headquarters, but it is understood here that Ottawa declined to accept the recommendation.

An offer has now been made for a more dignified, and only slightly less central building in Waterloo Place, built by the Cox Bankers and now owned by Lloyds' Bank.

This would be an ideal official home, but its price is very high.

MUST BE BI-LINGUAL.

Rule Concerns Montreal Catholic School Inspectors.
Quebec, May 5.—In future, school inspectors in the district of Montreal will have to possess a knowledge of both French and English, according to a decision arrived at by the Council of Public Instruction yesterday. This came as a result of an application made by Thomas Cuddeihy, inspector in the district of Montreal, who wanted to be given charge of English Catholic schools only.

Veteran Minister Passes.

Toronto, May 5.—Rev. William Tucker, a retired Methodist minister, died Thursday at his late residence, 30 Trandy avenue, in his 89th year. Born in Cornwall, England, Mr. Tucker came to Canada when 21 years of age, attended Victoria College at Cobourg, and was ordained in London, Ont., in 1865. For thirty-four years he was actively engaged in the ministry. He was stationed at charges in London, Toronto and Bay of Quinte Conferences. Twenty-eight years ago Mr. Tucker retired to Toronto, where he had lived since.

In 1867 Mr. Tucker married Mary Ann Godkin of Alisa Craig, who died five years ago. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Morton Gallagher, of Bay City, Mich., and two sons, Rev. W. Benjamin and Rev. S. T. Tucker, both of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

The Pleasure of Music.

Beauty in all its glory can be brought to the hearts of children through music.
The joy received from hearing beautiful melodies preserves that idealism, which is one of the most precious possessions of childhood. When such music is heard it reaches their consciousness through rhythm, melody, and harmony, through form and style, through the warmth of stringed instruments or the rich tones of a French horn, but it all affords a pleasure which finds echo within and is an influence for good.

The world can not live without music. It is uplifting and makes one think of the better things of life. When we realize how vital a factor music is in the life of each individual we will also realize how important it is to hear good music.

More Mixed Grain Grows.

Ingersoll, May 5.—That more mixed grain is being grown in this district than formerly is a fact that has been established in connection with the standing field crop competition to be held in oats under the auspices of the agricultural society. The rules governing the competition call for pure grain, and many of the farmers of the neighboring district have stated that they are growing mixed grain because of the increase in the yield.
