HIS STAR

By Juanita Hamel

When the night-time sky is a-glitter with its myriad points of light, somewhere—maybe right next door—there's someone who is looking at one star which he imagines is his alone. There, he dreams, hovers a face—the face of her he loves the best—serenely smiling, like lovely Fate, herself, luring him to higher things and affecting for the better, every thought and act of his life.

New Ways of Serving Two Early-Spring Delicacies

Asparagus and rhubarb are perhaps the two most important spring foods that engage the housewife's attention. The prices these foods bring put them into the luxury class for the first few weeks after they appear in the early spring. But by the time the markets are well-stocked prices begin to drop.

The young and tender rhubarb is mostly used as a sauce, or for the pastry that cannot be made with it after it grows old when the fibre is coarse and the flavor acid. The pink and tender stalks need not be peeled, but should be cut into pieces with a sharp knife, stainless steel knife or silver knife, which keeps it from turning black. When it gets old the stalks should be peeled and trimmed, then the cut pieces plunged into boiling water to stand ten minutes, which draws out the acid. Then they should be drained and used.

In preparing the young asparagus, trim the stalks back to the tender part. Then divide into as many bundles as are needed to serve as portions. Place them in an asparagus boiler and plunge into hot water to boil until tender, or stand in a small pot upright so that the tops steam while the stalks cook. The stalks that are cut off may be put into soup stock or used for a cream soup.

sugar and a half-cupful of water. When done add the juice of half a lemon and a tablespoonful of the rhubarb juice.

Rhubarb Pie

Prepare rhubarb enough to fill a pie plate full. Then plunge it into the boiling water for ten minutes and drain. Line the greased pie-plate with a good short crust, put in the rhubarb, sprinkle with two cupfuls of sugar in which a dessert-spoonful of cornstarch is mixed and a half-cupful of water. Put on the crust and bake in a medium oven about forty minutes.

MOTHERS DECIDE HISTORY

Interesting Time at Services Held in Harrowsmith and Hartington.

A Little Garden.

A little garden walking from its dream Of winter's silver to the green of spring. To hear the crimson, begasted robin sing Above brown beds where white narcissi gleam; By it gray wall the blue eyed violets smile Like fragments of the sky transformed to flowers And woven of the breath of sun and showers The jonquil lanterns linger yet a while.

A little garden tended with great care By gentle hands and watched with loving eyes When flames the scarlet finger of the dawn. A glad yet wistful little garden where Blossoms of love and hope like visions rise Amid old dreams of days that now are gone.

—Elizabeth Scollard.

Harrowsmith, May 15.—The services on Harrowsmith Methodist circuit last Sunday were fitting observance of Mothers' Day. At 11 a.m. in Hartington church the Mothers' Day service prepared by the Sunday school department in Toronto, was rendered. Over forty children occupied the platform. Recitations were given by Master Lloyd Babcock and Miss Ketta Moore. A solo was rendered by Miss Salome Goslin. An address was given to the young people by the pastor, Rev. R. W. Armstrong, on "Our Debt And Duty to Mother." The church was literally packed and many expressions of appreciation were heard.

At 7.30 o'clock, the service in Harrowsmith was a record one as far as attendance is concerned. Many expressed the opinion that it was the largest congregation ever seen in the church. Some fifty mothers filled the choir loft rostrum and side seats. Rev. R. W. Armstrong spoke on the text: "Blessed Art Thou Among Women." Luke 1:42. He illustrated the exalted place and extensive influence of Motherhood by brief sketches of the Mothers of the following men: Shakespeare, Lincoln, Napoleon, Beethoven, St. Augustine, Wesley, Jesus. "The Mothers of men," he said, "have determined the current of the world's history."
