

UNVEILING MARTIN MEMORIAL

WHO was Abraham Martin? Had that question been asked one year ago probably not one Canadian in a hundred thousand would have been able to answer it. Today it is different. Most Canadians now know he was first King's pilot on the St. Lawrence river, and the first known Canadian of Scottish extraction—two claims to distinction either one of which might have made him famous. Latterly other things to his credit have come to be known, and they will be recorded in their due place.

In the meantime it is not remarkable how little Canadians know of Canada's history—as rich a bit of nation history as ever was crowded into a space of three hundred odd years. The high points of the splendid story some of us know fairly well, but the little byways and side-lights, so full of human interest, they lie in a deep obscurity from which they are being rescued one by one, at the patient digging of this or that person or institution actuated by a love of the heroic past and a realization of its value in building the national life of the future.

Abraham Martin was some figure of a man in his day although most of his claims to fame seem to have been thrust upon him. It was hardly more than a matter of accident that the "Plains of Abraham" should come to be named after him, and yet that was plenty to set all good Canadians wondering who he was and what manner of life he led. Much digging in the archives of Quebec, and there are none more interesting or more faithfully kept, has brought out much information about the man and his times. He was born in France, his father being a Scot, which is probably why Jesuit writings of the times refer to him as "Abraham Martin, called the Scot." His father probably came from Perthshire and was one of the Scottish Guards of Louis XI. In 1614 Abraham brought his French wife to Canada and that he saw the actual founding of New France may be gathered from the fact that his name was on the list of the 81 white persons who lived in Canada from 1629 to 1632, and he was then known as a pilot. He later had ten children from whom have come a vast number of descendants among whom are numbered some of Quebec's best families and leading citizens. Bishop Tache of St. Boniface is one of his descendants in direct line; Champlain gave Martin a deed to the farm land on the Plains of Abraham, and documents telling of his living there still exist. He apparently travelled greatly up and down the river for Cape Martin in the Gulf of St. Lawrence is also named after him.

All this was distinctive enough to justify the memorial which has been raised to Martin in the Harbor Square at Quebec. The handsome shaft of granite, designed by Henri Hébert and T. Roxburg Smith, was unveiled early in May by Hon. Athanasius David, Quebec's Provincial Treasurer and the event was marked by a gathering of notables including the Governor of Quebec, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick. Among those who spoke were F. L. Wanklyn, representing the Canadian Pacific Railway Company by whom the memorial was erected. Lieut.-Col. Alex. Fraser, A.D.C. to the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, Lawrence Burpee, President of the Canadian Historical Society and Monsigneur Laflamme, Curé of the Basilica. The latter spoke as the successor of the first Curé of Quebec who was Martin's parish priest and who was afterwards martyred by the Iroquois. He read the baptismal certificate of Abraham Martin's first child who was also the first white child born in Canada. He also read the baptismal certificate of Martin's third child upon which appeared the name of Samuel de Champlain as godfather. The memorial has been set up by the Canadian Pacific in honor, not only of Abraham Martin but of the stout-hearted pilots who for over three hundred years have done so much to make the St. Lawrence River a safe and speedy route to and from Europe. That Company uses the route more than any other, and the arrival at Quebec of the great liner "Empress of Scotland" on her first trip of the season with 731 passengers from Europe later in the day of the unveiling emphasizes what has been accomplished in the making of the St. Lawrence route a great highway for ocean

While simple jersey suits are all the rage in some places, there are other beaches where the suits are invariably of taffeta or satin or printed silk or chiffon.

The two shown here serve to illustrate the radical differences of line. The tiered creation of taffeta is in direct contrast to the straight lines

"Oh, no," replied Smith, "I'm just wearing these to keep warm."

FINGER NAIL HINTS.

By Lucretia Bori, the Famous Spanish Prima Donna.

Do you ever stop to think how various parts of your body actually crave attention? If you think of your nails and your hair, and your eyes and your hands as separate personalities, each one longing for the loving care that will bring beauty in its wake, you will find yourself even more anxious to leave no beauty stone unturned. For if you consider them as only a minor part of you, it will be easier to deny yourself, and say: "No, I won't wash my hair today. It is a bit oily, but I'll wait." If you think of your poor hair as actually craving the attention you are withholding, and suffering from the lack of it, you'll be much more anxious to devote a little of your time to making it more fit and more beautiful. It's the same way with your finger-nails, about which I'm going to talk to you today. You can do much to enhance the charm of your nails if you keep the following articles in your dressing-table drawer:

- A good grease cream.
- Tube of white vaseline.
- Manicure scissors.

Of course, there are the usual manicure accessories, such as polish, pumice stone for cleaning under the nails, and your file. It is always best to file your nails, but for clipping them well at the corners you often find tiny nail scissors practically indispensable.

I am going to tell you the special use you should make of your tube of white vaseline. When you find your nails seem dry and brittle and are prone to cracking, melt a bit of white vaseline and rub the warm liquid well into your nails before going to bed at night.

This makes them smoother and less liable to crack. Cold cream serves much the same purpose. It is well to rub a good cold cream over your nails at least one night a week. It improves their appearance and makes it easier for you to keep the cuticle well pushed back.

Remember that powdered pumice stone rubbed under your nails with an orange stick removes stains and keeps your nails white. Give your nails a chance and watch the quick beauty improvement if you want to feel sure they really appreciate your care!

An Efficient Tip.
