INTERESTING ADDRESSES ON UNIVERSITY WORK

Given by Dr. Laing, of McGill, and Dr. Torry, of Alberta.

Those who missed the address of Dr. Laing of McGill and Dr. Torry of Alberta University Thursday evening at Convocation Hall, did not realize the treat in store for them, or they would have been there. President MacLean, of the University of Manitoba, as chairman of the evening, introduced the speakers. Dr. Torry, he said, was a close neighbor, and one for whom he had the greatest respect. He had watched with the greatest admiration Dr. Torry's work and expressed himself as surprised at the wonderful results. He had every confidence in Dr. Torry's aim — to transform the provincial university into a university college. In view of Dr. Torry's great grasp of educational questions, he felt no hesitation in introducing him to the audience to deal with "University Maintenance."

Dr. Torry dealt with the problem with which universities are faced in a general way. He pointed out that the educational centres of today are a direct result of the ideas and ideals of men like the late principal Grant, whom Queen's looks back to with such grateful memory. With these ideals as a nucleus gradually there was built and is being built the greatest universities of the present day. The hard part of it all is that those who have achieved these things were not appreciated by the people of their day, but must leave to posterity the realization of their worth.

Society, he said, can be divided into three classes; those who live wholly in the present accumulating for the moment, for personal aggrandisement; those who are not physically dead, but are dead in the past, and those who have made society such as the professors of the universities—quiet, unassuming men working on problems which some day will revolutionize industry, art and science, receiving no recognition now, but dying before their worth is known and appreciated. Dr. Torry paid great tribute to Pasteur of France. He showed where Pasteur's experiments practically paid France's war debt in 1870. Yet, his ability was never recognized till he died.

Education is the result of a spontaneous demand by the public and a zeal for higher education, which resulted in the various seats of learning now existing. The idea of universities to collect the vast amount of knowledge of the centuries, especially of the past, and give it to the students in an interesting way. The universities are a means of bringing together a group of men who are experts in their line, men with the finest brains the world can produce. To the cry that we are training too many men, Dr. Torry showed that in Alberta a mere handful of fifteen thousand students entered university, and of these seventy-eight per cent belonged to the common people and twenty-two per cent were from the leisure classes. Thus the universities train representatives from every class, men who have gone through the mill themselves and can add the better face and deal with industrial and world problems.

In conclusion Dr. Torry emphasized the necessity of university maintenance, because without the universities, the world would go backward. The world is based upon physics and chemistry, and it is only in the colleges and universities that the work which the world needs is done.

Dean Laing, the next speaker, gave a very witty and eloquent address on "sectionalism in education in Canada." He was first interested in the sale, by a report of a meeting published in the Montreal Gazette, in reference to a bureau of education to be established at Ottawa. It was with sharp disappointment that he realized nothing was done, because of the strong opposition which had developed. People were afraid that provincial autonomy would be endangered, that it would be the thin edge of the wedge which ultimately would destroy provincial freedom. In Quebec, the dark shadow of a minister of education became a fearsome thing, because he might come from Ontario. Quebec would be put under the same scourge as Ontario by people who think in Ontario that the poor man cannot walk alone, and must have liquor laws to keep him right.

On the other hand, said Dr. Laing, the establishment of a bureau would counteract the deadly sectionalism which has crept into our schools and a nation wide standardization would take the place of sectionalism. There was nothing wrong with the fathers of confederation. They tried to make a nation, but there was something wrong with the fact that a teacher in one province cannot teach in another without satisfying all the requirements of that particular province. Of all the provinces in the Dominion, only British Columbia, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia had reciprocal rights with each other. There was no other way which the country could be welded together into an harmonious whole than by an interchanging of teachers of different provinces. Why is it we have not more teachers from Scotland and England? This cry of Canada for Canadians was all bunkum. Get the best men, no matter where they come from.

Dr. Laing gave a very amusing example of local sectionalism in his own county, Middlesex. A vacancy occurred in the French department, but instead of getting some one from Quebec, they appointed a Middlesex farmer to lecture to the students, with the result that the students learned French very poorly. The bureau of education would bring about conferences among provinces and an amelioration of conditions. In the medical profession, a doctor must pass a final examination in medicine, then pass both provincial and dominion councils before he can practice in any place in Canada. This was a long, hard route, certainly, but the results were right and there is no reason why this cannot be applied to every other profession.

Dr. Taylor of Queen's, on behalf of the audience, tendered a most sincere vote of thanks to the speakers for the delightful, instructive, and entertaining evening they had made possible. The Universities Conference proceeded according to programme Friday morning, meeting at 9:30 in Convocation Hall. This afternoon at 4:15, the delegates will be entertained to tea at the Royal Military College from which they will motor out to the Cataract Golf and Country Club, where an informal dinner will be served at seven o'clock.

Visiting delegates, not mentioned before are Dr. Joseph Nolin, Dr. Georges Baril, Dr. Ernest Gendreau, Dr. Romeo Neven, Prof. Henry Nagnet (University of Montreal); also Father H. Carr of St. Michaels, Toronto.

SPLENDID SYSTEM FOR DEVELOPING OF FILMS

Quick Service and Fine Work Features of the Plant at L. T. Best's.

When it comes to service, with a capital S, in the line of finishing films and turning out the prints, the special department for this work at L. T. Best's drug store "takes the cake," as the saying goes. It is not generally known about the work of film finishing carried on by dealers, and a Whig reporter, while on his rounds on Thursday, happened to be in Best's drug store and overheard a conversation between a customer and the proprietor.

The customer had a rush order, and was asked to leave his films in the shop in the evening and call for them in the morning. The customer did so, and was more than pleased over the service.

The Whig's representative had the pleasure of making an inspection of this department, and found a complete equipment for the work. There are three rooms, especially arranged for the taking care of this important end of the business.

In room No. 1 was found a complete dark room, fitted up with all the necessary conveniences including three huge tanks of a capacity of sixty gallons each. An interesting test was given to show how one hundred rolls of films could be put through in a very short time, and also how easily this particular part is handled.

It is of interest to note that the films are practically untouched by hand. The system of time and temperature is used for film developing.

Room No. 2 is also fitted up as a dark room, and is complete in every detail for printing and developing from films and plates. The Whig man was amazed at the number of prints he found being put through. Hundreds of prints were passed along from operator to assistant, and on inquiry it was ascertained that in the course of one day over one thousand were turned out. To watch the process from the final washing to the print being placed on the polishing plate, which gives the high gloss to the already perfect picture, is most interesting.

The plates are transferred on trays to a drying cabinet, after which they are taken to a sorting room and placed in the proper envelopes. To an observer it is most delightful to note the simplicity with which the many hundreds of rolls of films are handled under a perfect system, and above all to see the finished pictures, a finished product that anyone might well be proud of.

Mr. Best is to be congratulated on giving the people such good service in this line of business, and judging by the amount of business Mr. Best is handling, it looks as if the camera users of Kingston and district do appreciate his efforts to give the best service possible.

With the fine weather now in full swing, just the kind for using the camera an extra rush of business is being looked forward to.

Burial of H. A. Hogle, Bath. The funeral of the late Harold Alexander Hogle was held from his late residence, Bath, on Thursday afternoon under the direction of the James Reid firm. Rev. Mr. Huffman conducted the service. The deceased is survived by a sister, Mrs. Green, Athens, and one brother, James Hogle, Chicago. The pallbearers were C. Callup, M. Mellon, H. Lewis, C. Cuppage, Daniel Robinson and Rev. Mr. Huffman.

Novel Wedding Gift to Duke and Duchess

Ottawa, June 15. — During his recent visit to England, Major H. K. Hodgson, Private secretary to His Excellency the Governor-General, presented to Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of York, the wedding gift of Lord and Lady Byng of Vimy. The wedding present was a handsome rug made of the hide of the largest Buffalo killed at Wainwright Park last year. The presentation was made at Buckingham Palace, and Their Royal Highnesses expressed their pleasure at receiving such a characteristically Canadian gift.

Peace in the Near East is once more delayed when the French premier refused to accept a compromise with the Turks on interest payment. Great Britain remains unchanged in her Ruhr policy, declared Premier Baldwin.

The question of redistribution will likely be settled today. Buy Dad a gift—for Father's Day, June 17th.
