Ottawa, June 28. - The Commons had a long and arduous day yesterday, but the prolonged debate over the constitutional aspects of the halibut treaty prevented any great volume of business being done till the evening was well advanced. Thereafter, a number of bills were disposed of.

The debate on the halibut treaty predicted a stiff controversy, but no serious addition was made to our constitutional lore. The best speec's came from Mr. Lapointe, who is well Vest. ersed in constitutional questions.

By way of consolation for Mr. Veill, who had failed to get further consideration for his immigration bill the prime minister announced that as the result of negotiations with Japan there ought henceforth |10 to be a very substantial reduction of the number of oriental immigrants reaching Canada. If this hope was not realized, then the matter could be dealt with next session.

He also informed Captain Shaw that the flat issued in connection with the Hoppe leases had been carcelled.

Mr. Church raised the question of he fate of Toronto's viaduct and the failure to carry out the 1913 agreement made between the city and the allway companies by which he claimed the government as the heirs of the Grand Trunk was bound.

hen Motor Backfires in Big Pleasure Launch. Clayton, N.Y., June 28 .- Frank Haas, who was badly burned at Alexandria Bay, is resting comfortably at his home here.

The motorboat "Shamrock First." owned by Mr. Haas' brother, Dell Haas, on which Mr. Haas was working, exploded and burned up. The boat was valued at $12,000 and was used in touring the islands. It was covered by $3,000 insurance. The boat was at Hutchinson's boat shop TI for repairs and had just been put in the water when the motor backfired and exploded.

Mr. Haas, who was alone in the boat, narrowly escaped with his life. The boat was sunk in order to save part of it. Mr. Haas' right arm and both hands were badly burned and he was also burned about the face.

To the Progressives the result brings nothing but gloomy apprehension for the future. Some profess to believe, however, that the rock on which the Drury government came to grief was the liquor issue, and that the result has no federal significance whatso-

At the present time, undoubtedly to these, the Conservative victory in the province has created considerable dismay. A very considerable number of them are former Liberals, and it is regarded as quite probable that they will shortly find means of returning to their old allegiance, and of assuring themselves re-nomination by rejoining the Liberal ranks. There have been, already, two defections in that direction, in the persons of Binette, of Prescott, and Hammli, of Muskoka. These probably anticipated the situation. Others may follow their lead later on, while former Conservatives may seek refuge with the official opposition

There are those who predict that, as a consequence of the overthrow of the Drury government in Ontario, Progressive movement will ultimately be confined to the west, and be regional in its scope.
