

The British Whig Pictorial Page

Marshal Joffre made his first public appearance in the horizon blue uniform he recently adopted at the unveiling of a memorial to the dead at Fontainebleau.

Lord Birkenhead is appealing to the nation for funds to enable the country to play a worthy part in the Olympic games of 1924 at Paris.

A cross has just been erected at Ballinablath to mark the spot where Michael Collins was shot dead.

These two fair Eskimos are half breeds, the daughters of a trapper on the road to Wainwright. The girls are showing a day's catch.

Miss Olive Jones, a New York City school principal, has been elected president of the National Education Association of the United States.

Miss Annette Baird, daughter of Lady Ethel Baird, and a member of London's younger set was recently presented at court.

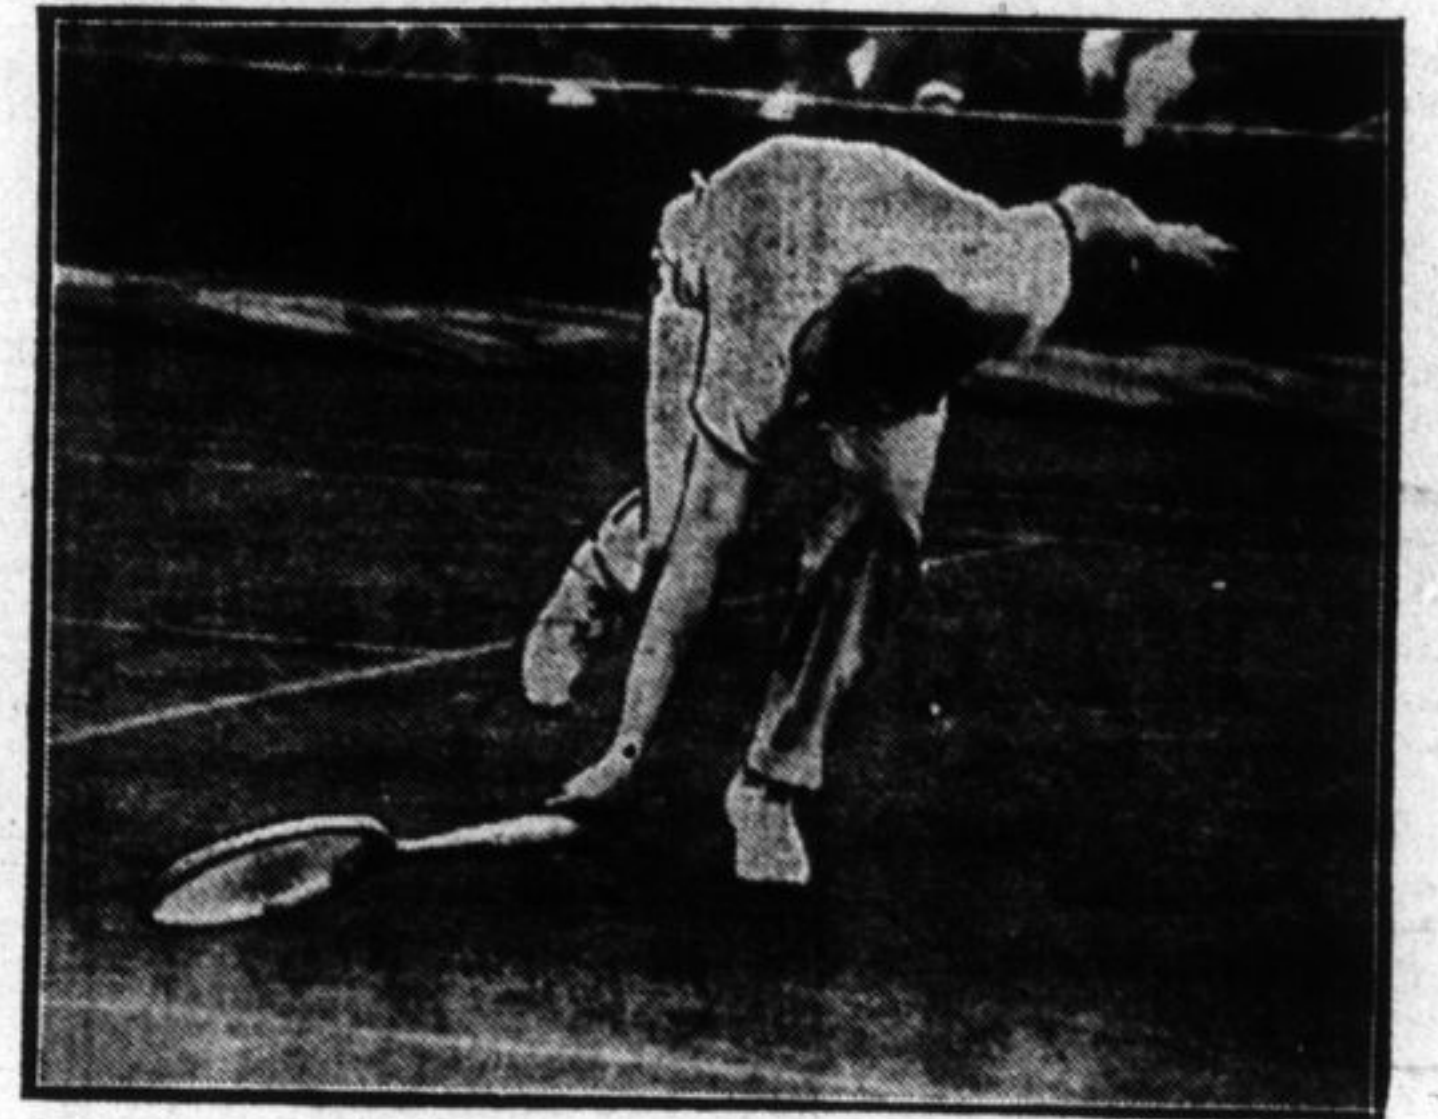

Photo shows J. Burgnon the brilliant French tennis player, who beat B. E. Henty in the opening match at Wimbledon.

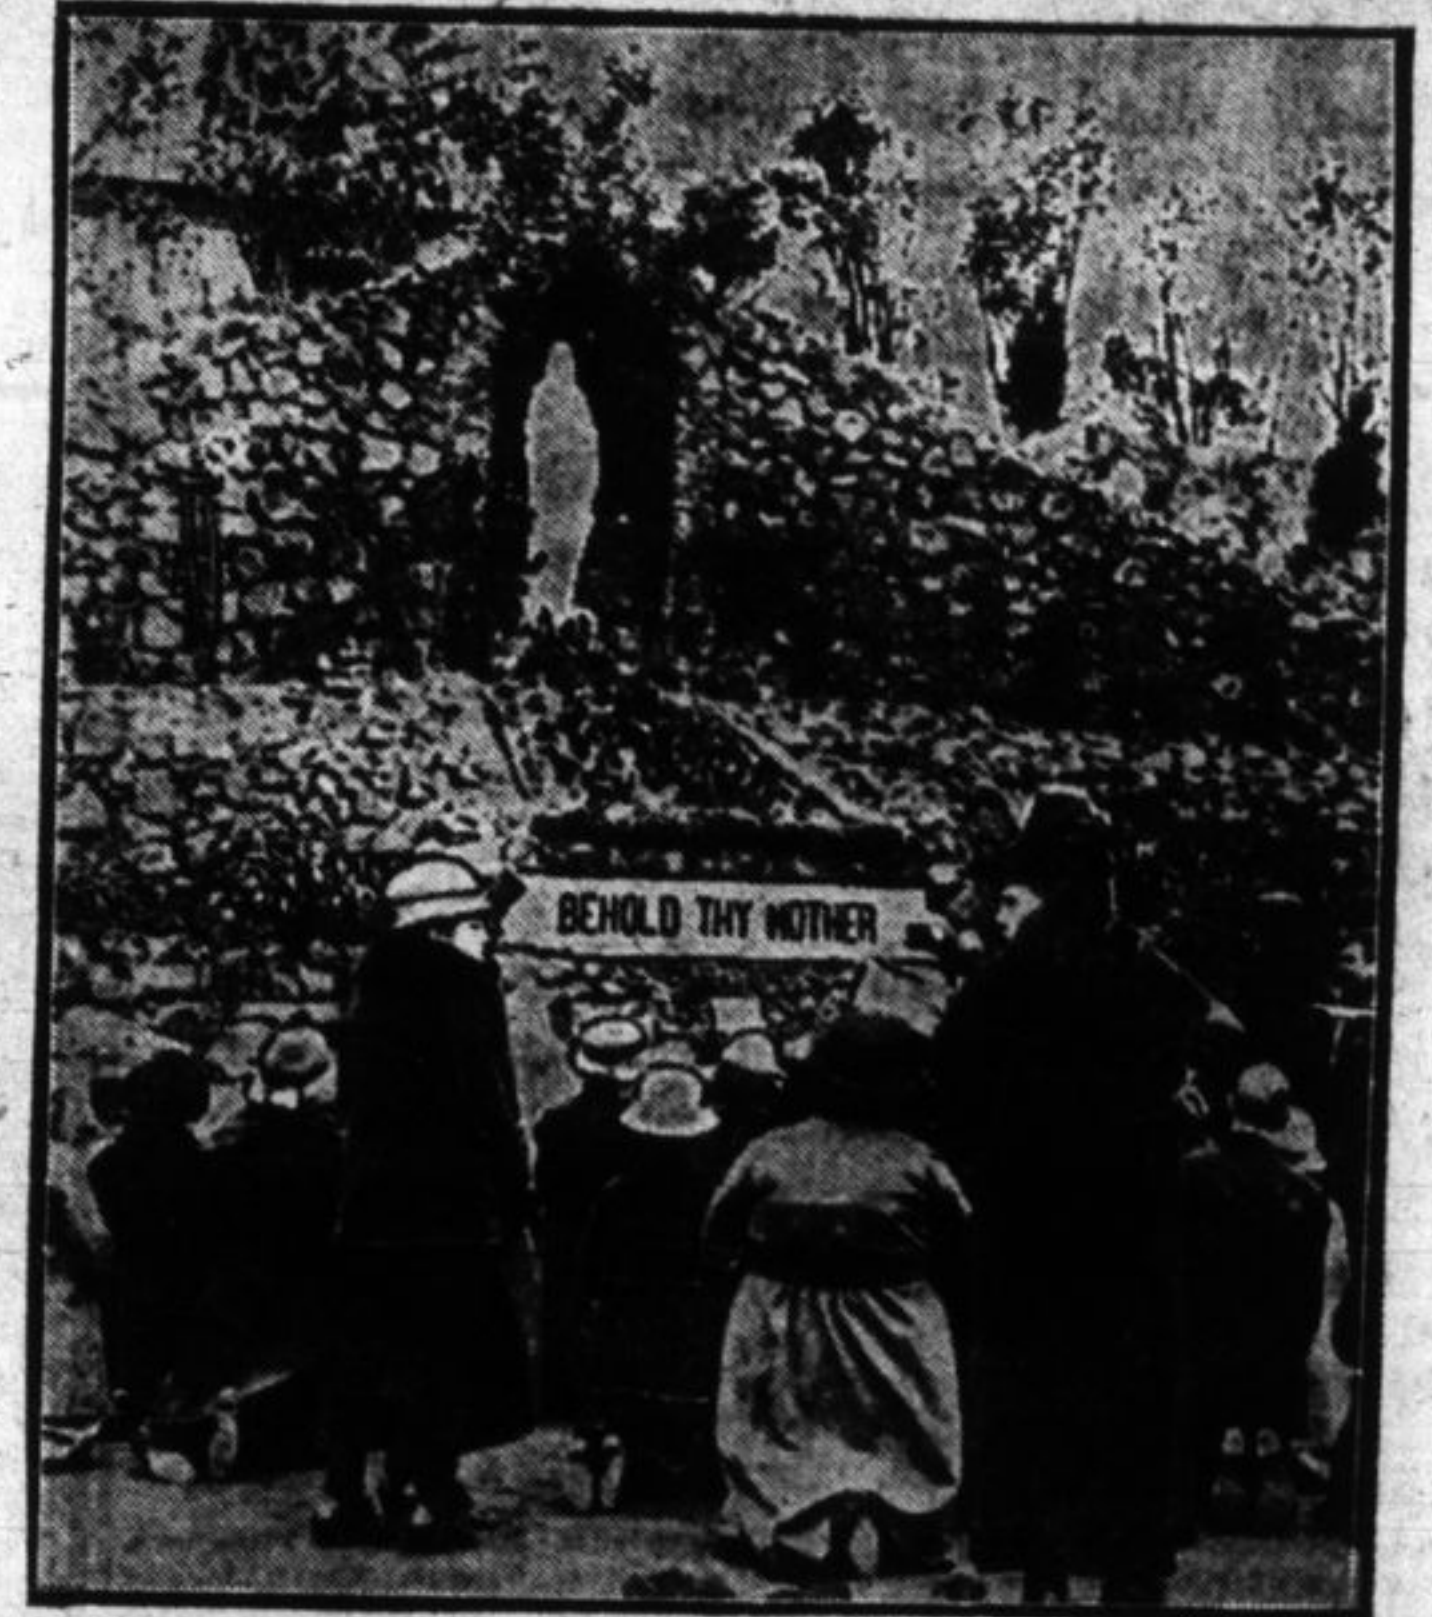

This father has solved the dark and poorly ventilated flat problem by building a cage outside his third-storey window for his baby.

The fashion world says this is the latest in hats for fall wear. Streamers threaten to predominate in all models.

Hedy Pfundmeyer, the "Salome" of the opera house in Vienna, has been offered an engagement in New York.

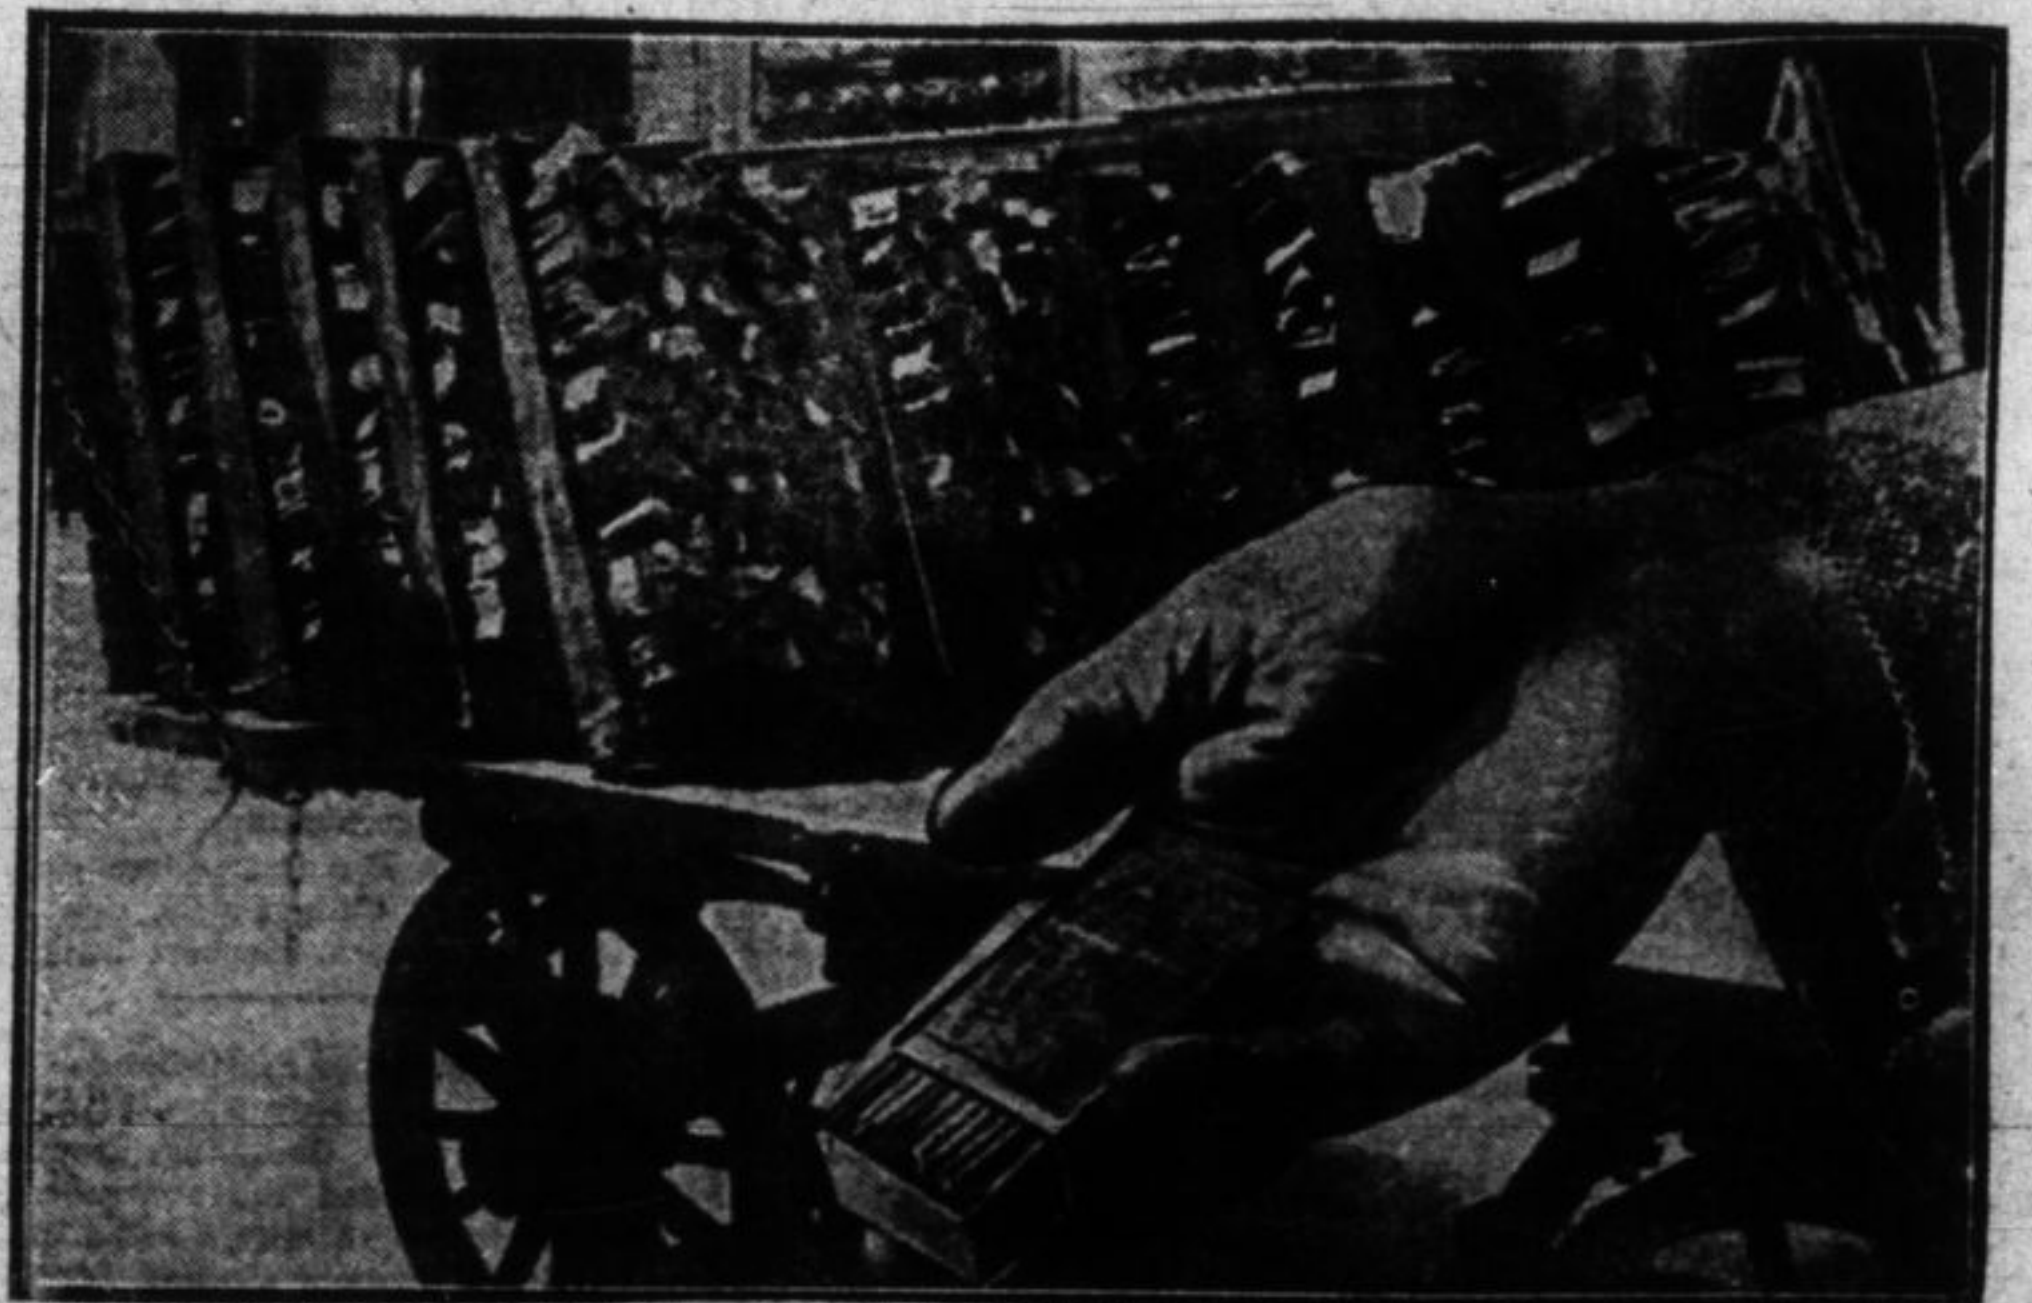

To this little grotto at Garfin, Scotland, come hundreds of people from all parts of the country to pray for restoration of health.

Thousands of refugees have flocked from Asia Minor to the tented colonies around Athens and other sections of Greece.

Miss Sybil Bauer of Illinois, breaks swimming records as fast as she makes them. Recently she lowered her own 150-yard back stroke standard.

The depreciation of the German mark is graphically shown in the above photograph. In the olden days a load of kindling wood could be bought for the price of a small box of matches to-day.