

The British Whig Pictorial Page

The Proletary was the first Russian trade ship to ply between Russia and London. London dockers refused to unload her cargo, which consisted of four hundred tons of eggs.

This advanced fall style displays the newest in sleeves, which are long and loose within four inches of the wrist. The skirt laps over and is drawn up on one side.

The K-26 is England's latest and largest submarine. It is now undergoing her trial trips at Portsmouth.

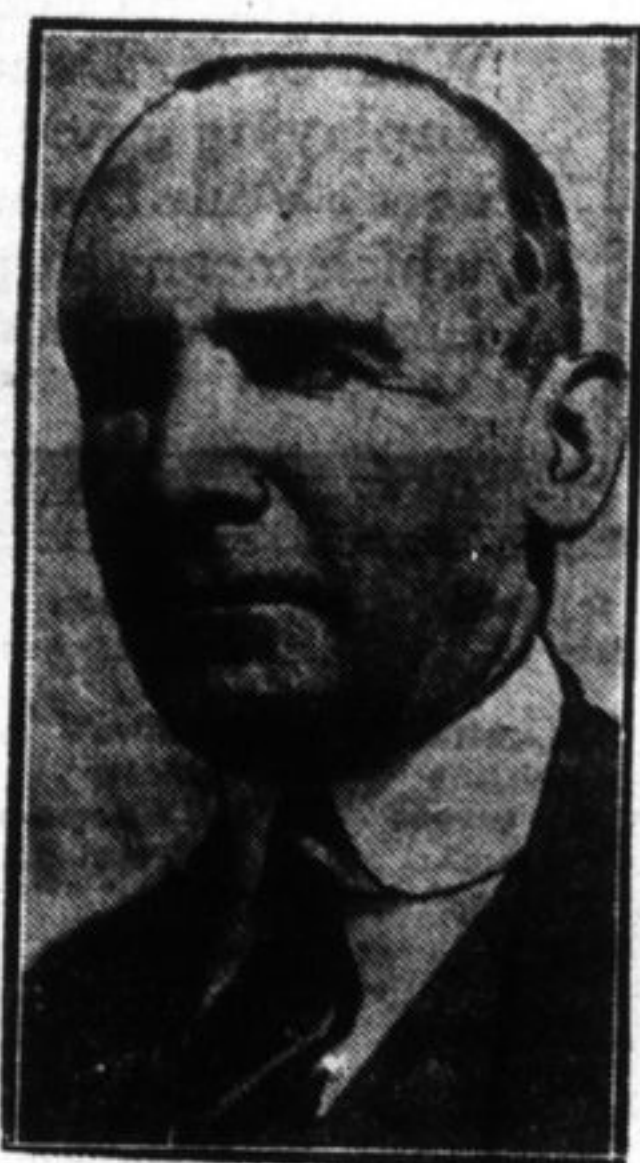

Because she is accused of being "unfaithful" to Germany during the World War, Frieda Hempel, world-famed singer, is howled down at every performance where she tries to sing in that country.

To the world's championship cowboy goes this Roosevelt Trophy, which is to be contested for on a point basis at Cheyenne Frontier Days in July and the famous Pendleton roundup in September.

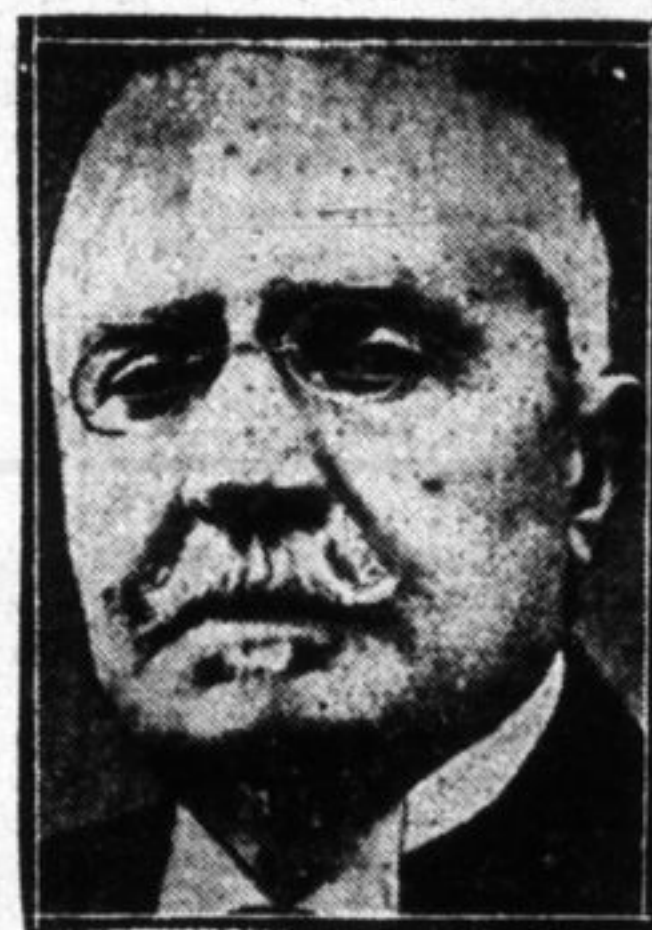

The seventeenth annual contest between the bowling associations of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales commenced at Croydon, England. It is twelve years since the contest last took place.

Count Harry Kessler of Berlin, well-known scholar and diplomat, who has arrived on this continent for an attempt to untie the European tangle by a series of lectures.

Benny Leonard proved that he is still the world's lightweight champion when he defeated Lewis Tendler in the fifteen, one-sided but interesting rounds.

Dr. Alexander Tsankoff has been appointed premier of Bulgaria. He is one of the keenest financial authorities in all Europe, a noted scholar and author.

Miss Adelia Prichard of Portland, Oregon, has achieved the distinction of being elected president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, which met recently.

A competitor, with an "out-size" rosebag, waiting his turn to be judged at "Our Dumb Friends League," Costers' Donkey Show at Kensington Palace Field.

Baron de Warzee, Belgian minister to Cuba, is now acting charge d'affaires at Washington during the absence of Baron de Cartier de Marchienne.

Princess Falmy Bey, French wife of the murdered young Egyptian Prince Ali Falmy Bey, who is accused of having shot and killed her husband in a fit of jealousy.

At the stamp market in Paris collectors of all ages and nations gather on Thursdays and Sundays of every week and trade various issues. Old and young are equally intent on their hobby.