A little talk with the five young girls of the Metropolitan Orchestra, which gave the citizens of Kingston such a treat on Tuesday, at the Chautauqua, was most interesting. These girls, who have come from the Southern States, playing and singing in the cities along the Atlantic coast, are bright, well-educated and full of the music they interpret so well. They have a good time as they go on their way, as the merry laughter from their dressing room told their visitor. The young leader and violinist, Miss Lina Groff, the cellist, Miss Katharine Roberts, the flutist, her sister, Miss Mona Roberts. Miss Katherine Forbes sings delightfully and is also the drummer playing the big drum with ease. Miss Frances Beaman is the sympathetic accompanist and the pianist who brings real music out of the keys with her excellent technique. They travel westward, arriving at the end of their tour in Michigan in September.

The Direct Attack. According to William T. Tilden, a sportsmanlike tennis player always makes a deliberate display when the umpire makes a decision unfair to his opponent. The professional ballplayer's method is more direct. He merely kills the umpire.

Sleep over your problems and you will come to a resolution. There are some who despise pride and with greater pride.

CHAUTAUQUA WEEK BEGAN IN GOOD FORM

The Metropolitan Orchestra Put up a Programme of Rare Merit.

The big Chautauqua tent on the cricket field held an enthusiastic audience on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, when the Kingston week, of the Dominion Re-Plains Chautauqua, began under the auspices of the Rotary Club. Leman A. Guild, the president of the club, gave a short address. The programme was, he said, even better than last year, when it was greatly enjoyed; a few season tickets could still be obtained at the price which was very small. Mr. Guild told the audience something of the work of the Rotary Club for underprivileged boys and girls for which the surplus from the Chautauqua would be used. Last year the club had given $460 to the Barnardo Home for boys and had spent nearly $1,000 on shoes and stockings for the school children of Kingston, who would otherwise be unable to attend school.

The Metropolitan Orchestra, composed of five exceedingly clever girls, gave a most delightful programme. Music for every one was there. An overture of Raymond's by the orchestra, several songs by Miss Katharine Forbes, who also plays the big drum in the Orchestra, "The Drum Song" from "Mlle. Modiste" was most charming, the singer's clear enunciation making her sweet soprano even more attractive. The dear old favorite "The Blue Danube Waltz" (Strauss) was rapturously welcomed. Miss Groff, a young violinist, a slim figure in a white frock, plays divinely both as the leader of the orchestra and as a soloist. Her Kreisler number "Leibes Freund" was a delight; execution and spirit making a delightful combination. The Roberts Sisters played the alliphone and brought sweetness from the strings with their soft hammers. Miss Frances Beaman was the accompanist and pianist and her Greig number was much enjoyed. The concluding number of the afternoon was "Home Sweet Home" played as it would be by the musicians of various countries and the audience heard the familiar air with castanets in Spain, with gongs in China, with variations in Italy and interspersed with grace notes as it would be in Scotland.

A Wonderful Performance. John B. Ratto, known as the greatest impersonator of the day, gave a wonderful performance. In the first part of his programme he kept the audience in roars of laughter with his amusing stories and recitations, and following this, he was ably assisted in his impersonations of some of the greatest music writers. The big feature of his programme came with his impersonations in "make-up" of some of the notable personages of the day, including Lloyd George, Woodrow Wilson, General Foch, King of Servia, and others. Round after round of applause from the audience testified to the appreciation of the audience, and at the close Mr. Ratto was tendered an ovation. The various "make-ups" were true to life, while the speeches of those prominent men, as given by Mr. Ratto, were remarkable. Each character was presented in true form, and captivated the audience.

Mr. Ratto proved himself of an entertainer of the first rank and he had the pleasure of holding the interest of his audience from start to finish.

Praise for Rotary Club. Mr. Ratto, following his programme, took occasion to thank the audience for their co-operation in making the Chautauqua a success in Kingston and paid a number of tributes to the members of the Kingston Rotary Club, in bringing to the city a programme of such high merit. In bringing the Chautauqua to Kingston the Rotary Club was giving something to the people that could not be equalled in the way of entertainment. The Rotary Club was deserving of much praise for the excellence of the programme.

A Splendid Treat. The musical people who were out in force were charmed with the Metropolitan Orchestra who played the opening overture, with the verve and spirit and satisfactory ensemble that characterizes their music. Miss Beaman's rendition of Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C sharp minor, was original and delightful. Miss Forbes sang in costume, "The Nightingale of Lincoln's Inn" and responded to the applause by "Comin' Through the Rye." Again Miss Groff played her fiddle to everyone's pleasure and the orchestra completed this part of the programme with the march of "The Nation's Awakening."

But later in the evening these clever girls assisted Mr. Ratto in his wonderful impersonation of musical composers whose works are household words in musical families. When this versatile artist transformed himself into the Frenchman Bizet, they played the music of his celebrated opera, "Carmen" while he conducted with the impatient fire of a Frenchman. Turning his back in a second he was the gentle Felix Mendelssohn, quickly conducting the famous "Spring Song," exquisitely played by the orchestra.

chestra. "The Anvil Chorus" was played with spirit, as Verdi stood before the audience and the Tannhauser martial music as Richard Wagner, the great German, was conducting. Rossini, too, had his turn on a Kingston stage.

The vast audience was delighted with the first night of the Chautauqua, and many expressions of appreciation of the public spirit of the Rotary Club in bringing, at their own risk, such a splendid group of artists to Kingston, were heard.

To-Night's Programme. Tonight the Glen Wells Company will entertain, and a special feature of the programme will be an address by Judge George D. Alden on "The Needs of the Hour." Into this lecture Judge Alden has put the result of years of study, observation and extensive travel. Possessed of a rare gift of humor, Judge Alden will tell of present-day conditions, and his address is being looked forward to with great interest. Judge Alden, of Boston, is an eminent jurist and publicist.

The refreshment booth of the Chautauqua is under the charge of the wives of the Rotarians, and is being well patronized.

During the programme on Tuesday night there was an intermission, when ice cream was served.

The audiences on Tuesday were delighted with the programme and all the arrangements made for the event, and the first day of the Chautauqua was a great success in every way.

TO-MORROW'S HOROSCOPE BY GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 2. An unusually active and eventful day may be forecast from this day's sidereal operations. There may be all manner of stirring events with possible sudden changes and new moves toward large and bold projects. The spirits may be particularly adventurous and enterprising and disposed to conquer certain stubborn setbacks and obstacles. Those in the employment of others are under excellent prospects, but all should beware deceit and false friends. Aggression should not be carried too far.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to have a very active and eventful year with efforts directed to new and bold projects. They should be on guard against deceit and should not be foolhardy in enterprise. Those in the employment of others should push for advancement if undeniably deserving. A child born on this day will be energetic, resourceful, and disposed to carve its way to fortune despite many obstacles and difficulties.

The Editor Hears

That the Chautauqua went off with a swing on the opening day that made everyone present determined to see the act as much as possible the good things provided by the management of this excellent company.

That the press women throughout Canada are preparing to attend the Triennial Meeting of the Canadian Woman's Press Club, which will be held in Vancouver, B.C., from September 24th to 25th.

That the Prince who will marry Miss Louise MacLachlan, Chatham, was born in Russia while his parents were in exile from Montenegro. He served in the Russian army during the war and was decorated for bravery. He is a cousin of Queen Helena, of Italy.

Since Miss MacLachlan wanted a business man for a husband "Roddy" has taken employment with the Standard Oil Company at Samonia, Greece.

That the girl students of the summer school are good baseball players and put up a fine game against the Sydenham street girls, who are noted athletes.

That some of the present-day brides are going back to a very old, almost prehistoric custom. Instead of fastening the veil with flowers, they are merely dropping the veil over the head without any fastening except perhaps an invisible hair pin.

Cleanings from Ontario Institutes. The Canadian Farmer. Clachan Institute, West Elgin, has built sheds for the Community hall, and provided dishes and a curtain for the hall, in addition to meeting the needs for local relief.

Jeanville, in West Victoria, has bought a five acre lot which they intend to lay out as an athletic ground and in time to build a community hall. This Institute is making a success of amateur plays.

READY

By Juanita Hamel

Of what do you think when you're ready and waiting for someone? Doesn't it—as well as the expression on your face—depend upon the person for whom you are waiting? And can't you often tell by the expression on another's face, whom she is ready to greet with a happy smile? Sometimes there are other signs—the hearts on this gate, for instance—but it's the heart shining through the happy face that tells the real story, after all!
