

The British Whig Pictorial Page

The island of Java is not only famous for the coffee grown, but also for the many Batik makers that live there. A typical scene is these Batik makers strolling or working on the streets.

Here is Jacksonville's unique mayor, Edward Crabtree, who has refused to accept any salary for his duties. He has been elected three times without making a single campaign speech.

The downfall and death of Former Premier Stambouliaky of Bulgaria came only after a brave defense of the headquarters of the Orange Guard. The chipped walls show the heavy fire the building was under during the recent revolt.

Priscilla Dean and Gladys Walton enjoy the cool waters of Miss Dean's swimming pool on her new estate in Beverly Hills. This pontoon raft affords them much pleasure.

Albert Chevalier, whose death has been announced in London recently.

Mme. Carpentier, wife of the French boxing idol, is vacationing at Dieppe with her little daughter Jacqueline.

Part of a boy scout's training is first aid and carrying methods for the injured. This little fellow appears happy despite his bandaged condition.

Mrs. R. N. M. Pearce, member of a British commission, and her son, left New York recently for England.

Theodore W. Case, a millionaire inventor of Auburn, New York, claims that he has perfected the invention of talking movies.

A chip off the old block is young Doug, who wears his daddy's smile in a recent picture made of the famous star's son.

The wonders of the rocket firing apparatus were explained when a number of M.P.'s inspected the Tenby motor life boat at Westminster.

The Prince was deeply interested in an arithmetic lesson as it is taught to the Royal Normal College for the Blind at Upper Norwood.

Paisley and roshanara crepe take first place in the fall wardrobe. The skirt is lapped over at the side and is entirely made of paisley except for a narrow strip on the side.

The mayor greets "Charles Dickens" at the author's birthplace during the resurrection of Charles Dickens' characters in the Pageant of Portsmouth at Southsea Castle.